Raiders Pound London by Glare Of Red Flares

Weird Lamps Guide Second Night Attack; 200 Nazi Planes Ambushed, Chased

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Sept. 21. German bombers, after a brief interlude during the night, returned to their bomb attacks on London early today amid a barrage of antiaircraft fire.

[The British censorship prohibited transmission of the precise times the night raid began and ended and the new onslaught began.]

During the first attack the skies had been alight with the sharp flashes of heavy antiaircraft fire rising all about the city.

Red Flares Dropped

A number of bombs fell—some of them in districts south of the Thames—and for a time flares threw a hard, red light over the center of London. Bombs followed the flares.

In the second attack six heavy bombs exploded in central London and others smashed into the south London area.

A church hall in central London and a factory next door were set afire by a bomb.

British pilots, in lofty ambuscade over the air lanes leading to London, sprang a daylight trap yesterday on a German squadron of 200 planes and, it was declared authoritatively, sent them back toward France in disorderly retreat.

The brief and violent battle that began above cloud level and then was strung out in many a howling plane-to-plane encounter above the English Channel was the greatest engagement in yesterday's defense of London, whose people by noontime had been once in and once out of the air-raid shelters.

Last night, darkness brought a

Berlin (Saturday), Sept. 21.—Nazi fighter planes were reported early today to have routed two mass formations of British bombers over western Germany in air battles, following official claims that Reichsmarshal Goering is using a new "cloud-busting X-ray" weapon against London.

The "cloud-busting" Nazi bombers, equipped with a penetrating ray to overcome severe weather which has curbed the fury of Germany's air siege, were said to hold the promise that London's resistance may be crushed no matter how bad the fog and rain may become.

The secret of the new Nazi weapon, according to an official spokesman, is the vividly painted nose of the "cloud-buster" bomber which serves as a filter for the X-rays.

One of the waves of massed British bombers routed over western Germany, near Hannover, apparently was bent on bombing Berlin again, it was stated early today.

The force of the raiders was

Africa's Fate Settled by Axis, Rome Is Told

Press Hints Future Of Greece and Turkey Is Being Considered

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 20.—Adolf Hitler, by proxy, and Benito Mussolini, in person, advanced their plans today for domination of Europe and Africa, Axis sources indicated after German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Il Duce held their second consultation in as many days.

A division of Africa in which Spain would get part of French Morocco for supporting Germany and Italy in the war—perhaps by serving only as an additional base of operations against such British bastions as Gibraltar—was believed in foreign circles to have been the main topic of conversation.

The visiting foreign minister and Il Duce conversed for about an hour this afternoon at Palazzo Venezia. A German source said Von Ribbentrop intended to return to Berlin tomorrow.

Reported From Berlin

Speculation on the tenor of the Italian-German talks was based largely on German reports in Italian newspapers.

The Fascist press left it to its Berlin correspondents to report the Rome conference. They wrote that a new arrangement for both Europe and Africa would have to be completed after "final and total" annihilation of the British Empire.

Some writers looked even further—to the Near East, where they indicated the Axis also intends to supplant British and French influence. They said Syria, Palestine, Iraq and Trans-Jordan were stirred by the prospect of "new times" coming.

L'Avvenire, a Rome newspaper, indicated that the conferees also discussed a possible carving up of Greece, which, with Turkey, is strongly under British influence.

The paper spoke of "Greek-Bulgarian tension" as one of the subjects taken up and said that not only Italy has claims on Greece, but Bulgaria also has long been seeking an outlet through Greece to the Aegean Sea.

Other matters taken up, l'Avvenire said, were critical relations between

"Wings Over America"

Starts Sunday

A series of Sunday only articles on commercial and military aviation in America: Army Air Corps and Naval Air Reserves, civilian pilots, non-flying jobs in air defense, training schools, how planes fly. These are just a few of the phases covered by Nathaniel F. Silsbee, of the National Aeronautic Association, in "Wings Over America," starting in Sunday's Post.

Leaflet Passer Can't Go Back To Virginia U.

David Carliner, 21, a McKinley High graduate and a law student at the University of Virginia, will not be readmitted to the law school of that institution, the administrative council announced yesterday at Charlottesville, Va.

Arrested early this month for distributing leaflets on the streets of Charlottesville without a permit, Carliner was tried in police court and fined. Failure to appear in court the following morning brought a jail sentence and a $25 fine.

Carliner, who was given a two-day suspension in 1934 while a student at McKinley after he had called a mass meeting to protest cancellation of the high school football games, was prominent in many college activities at the University. Last spring he was elected editor of the Virginia Spectator.

Rule by 'Few' Condemned By Roosevelt

No Dictator Ever Dared Run Gantlet Of Election, He Says At Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.—President Roosevelt, warning against rule by a "few at the top," declared today that the ultimate safeguard to America's heritage of freedom lies in free and unhampered elections.

And, he told 14,000 students and alumni at the University of Pennsylvania, "no dictator in history has ever dared to run the gantlet" of such an election.

The Chief Executive said he placed his faith in "the superior ability of the whole of the voters to pass upon political and social issues in free and unhampered elections, as against the exclusive ability of a smaller group of individuals at the top of the social structure."

Address in Convention Hall

In the hall where the Democratic Party gave him his second nomination in 1936, Mr. Roosevelt declared this is no time for any man "to withdraw into some ivory tower" and hold himself aloof from "the problems and agonies of his society."

Merely by averting his eyes, no man can sever the bonds which unite him to his society, he said in Convention Hall where, three months ago, the Republican Party nominated Wendell L. Willkie.

While the President refrained from any mention of parties or candidates, he made several jocular allusions to the fact that this is a campaign year.

At the start, he suggested that it might have been well if the university founders would have established the institution a year earlier so its bicentennial did not fall in an election year.

He got a hearty chuckle from the audience, and again when he advo-

Willkie Won't Pull Punches

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 20.—Wendell L. Willkie, on the way here late today, served notice on the "timid pussy-footers" in his following that he would not pull his punches.

In a talk at Sacramento this evening the Republican nominee disclosed something that already was pretty well known on his campaign train—that for a week he has been bombarded with telegrams begging him to take it easy where President Roosevelt was concerned, to attack the New Deal rather than the author of the New Deal.

Referring to this "friendly advice" in his talk at Sacramento, capital of California and home of Senator Hiram Johnson, Willkie said:

"They say 'Wendell, you ought to pull your punches.'

"Well, I don't know how to fight that way, and if any timid pussy-footers want me to pursue such a policy I don't want them to talk to me. A spade is a spade in Sacramento, and also in Washington. In my solemn judgment, if

—Out of Bounds

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Government officials are planning construction of the first Federal office building staffed by Washington personnel but located outside the District, it was learned yesterday.

The project, a radical departure but held inevitable because the Capital proper is nearing the saturation point in public building construction, was disclosed when the National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved plans for the structure.

As described by W. E. Reynolds, head of the Public Buildings Administration, it will be erected—provided funds are granted by Congress—on an 18-acre Government-owned site in Arlington County, Va., near Fort Myer.

The building will be three stories in height, but extremely long, and will cost $3,200,000. It would be turned over to the Navy Department, which is sorely in need of additional space.

Area Once Held Unneeded

Choice of Arlington County for the new building recalls that this political subdivision, as well as present-day Alexandria, was retroceded to Virginia in 1846 because the 33-square-mile zone across the Potomac was held to be unneeded by the Nation's Capital.

In comparatively recent years the Federal Government has built an agricultural experimental station and a road-testing laboratory in nearby Virginia, as well as a medical research institute, Naval Medical Center and other facilities in nearby Maryland, but never before a building intended solely for office workers.

The planning commission also took favorable action on plans submitted by Reynolds for a proposed Federal office building to be erected in the vicinity of Lincoln Park and a west central heating plant near K street northwest and the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway. Congressional action also is awaited on appropriation applications for these structures.

Action on Other Proposals

The planners, concluding their two-day monthly meeting yesterday, also acted on the following:

Approved architectural plans for a proposed annex to the Federal Reserve Board Building. The design previously was passed by the Fine Arts Commission.

Voted to send Chairman Frederic A. Delano to any Senate hearings which may be held on the District reorganization bill to oppose the section which would give the Board of Education control of the Capital's public recreation facilities. The commission favors the establishment of a

Son of Heiress Kidnaped; $100,000 Ransom Asked

In Kidnaper's Hands . . .

Curly-haired Marc De Tristan, 3-year-old son of a wealthy California family, was snatched from the hands of his nurse yesterday near his parents' palatial home in Hillsborough. The kidnaper signed a note "Unconventional Eccentric" and demanded $100,000 for the boy's safe return

De Tristan Family Ready To Meet Terms at Once; FBI and California Police Agree to Stand Aside

By the Associated Press

Hillsborough, Calif., Sept. 20.—Three-year-old Marc de Tristan, jr., scion of two immensely wealthy families, was kidnaped today by a man who left a ransom note demanding $100,000.

A few hours later a spokesman for the parents, Count and Countess Marc de Tristan, said the family was ready to meet "all demands of the man."

"We have requested all law enforcement agencies to withhold any action in this case until we have complied with any and all requests of the man who has our child," said a statement handed reporters by Louis S. Cates, wealthy copper magnate and stepfather of the countess.

Demands of the kidnaper were set forth in a 600-word note signed "Unconventional Eccentric." It was left thrown at the feet of the child's nurse, middle-aged Mary Foley, who was taking Marc for a walk in the fashionable residential quarter when the kidnaping occurred.

Cates' statement also said:

"So far, all law enforcement officials have agreed to comply with our requests, and we are ready to meet all demands of the man.

"In kindness to us, we believe that everybody should withdraw from the vicinity of our home to give the person holding the boy every opportunity to communicate with us.

"We appreciate the problems of the press and wish to cooperate with them. However, in the interest of the child we ask the cooperation of the press in withdrawing from the vicinity of our home."

Later, law enforcement authorities said they were withdrawing temporarily from the case. Newsmen also complied with the request to leave the vicinity of the home.

Authorities, in first reporting the kidnaping, said two men were involved—one who snatched the child, and a second who drove the kidnap car. Later, they said it was uncertain there was a second man.

Leaves Hat Behind

The kidnaper struck the nurse to the ground, grabbed the baby and ran. In his flight he lost his hat which, with the 600-word ransom note and a meager description of the kidnap car, was the only clew at hand.

The distracted parents were near collapse as FBI men took charge of the first big kidnap case in the Nation in many months.

[In Washington, there were reports that J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI would go to California to lead the hunt for the kidnaper. The FBI offices here, however, said there was "no comment" on the report. Unofficial sources, however, declared the full force of the FBI would be thrown at once into the case.]

The note was specific in directing the manner in which the $100,000 was to be paid. The parents were to "secure money leisurely, at your convenience," the instructions said. "Avoid attention—you have ample time."

Equally specific were instructions for contacting the kidnaper—by means of an advertisement in the automobile section of the classified pages of a San Francisco paper.

"Should, as a result of interference, our position become untenable," the ransom note warned, "it will be difficult to control this matter . . . We have absolutely no desire to make your loss irreplacable."

"Enlightened People"

On the other hand, the instructions said, "You are dealing with intelligent and enlightened people and you needn't fear an unjustifiable act on our part. On the contrary, our little captive (guest, rather) will be most charmingly treated . . . Your child's supervision has been carefully selected in advance."

Text of Note Of Child's Abductor

Hillsborough, Calif., Sept. 20.—The text of the kidnap note released by the Hillsborough police after the kidnaping of 3-year-old Marc de Tristan reads:

We are presenting to you a very unsocial matter—however, don't be unduly alarmed.

We suggest you study our note quietly, remain calm, and do not act on the impulse of the moment. Wait until you understand the situation clearly.

We assure you that your child is perfectly safe with us and of course will be returned to you in due time—you are dealing with intelligent and enlightened people and you needn't fear an unjustifiable act on our part—on the contrary — our little captive (guest, rather) will be most charmingly treated while in our care and shall enjoy every consideration for physical and mental comfort. Your child's supervision has been carefully selected in advance and we are certain this little interlude will not leave any unpleasant memories or impressions for the future.

We have approached you in a conversational tone and we hope you will appreciate and preserve this friendly spirit and in the absence of irritation and excitement the early and satisfactory solution of this problem is well assured.

We insist on absolute silence and privacy on your part. We cannot tolerate any meddling in this matter and in your own interest we must warn you against any attempts to communicate WITH ANY LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCY, either Federal or private—their activities could not possibly escape our attention, much less be of any benefit either to you or your child.

But their opposition would certainly create a complicated and dangerous situation—the negative or fatal result of their interferences are too well known to deserve comment—cooperate with us—it is your best protection.

We trust you will remain cool

Married Men Face Draft, Too

Lawyers Say No

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Married men will not be exempted automatically from the draft simply because of their married status, Army officials said yesterday.

Local draft boards will pass on each case, it was stated, and they may require proof that the wife is actually dependent upon her husband's earnings for support. Presumably, they would take into consideration whether the wife is employed and whether they have an income from sources other than the husband's job.

A blanket deferment of all married men had been planned by the Army and proposed regulations for the draft had so provided. Officials of the Army and Navy Selective Service Committee disclosed yesterday, however, that these regulations were being revised because of a provision in the Conscription Act itself, which their legal authorities say bars the automatic exemption.

$338,263,902 in Two Minutes

Meanwhile, the Senate broke all speed records for appropriating money, passing a $338,263,902 bill to provide housing for the men to be drafted into the Army. Approved by the House Thursday, it was taken up directly, without formal reference to a committee, and passed in less than two minutes.

Short Weight Costs 390 Days

Police Court Judge Hobart Newman yesterday imposed the most severe sentence recorded in the District for violation of the weights and measures law on Bernard N. Siegel, president of the Square Deal Market Co., Inc.

Siegel was sentenced to pay fines totaling $3,900 and to serve 390 days in jail on 13 charges of short weight. If the fines are not paid, the total jail sentence would be 780 days.

His attorney noted an appeal and Judge Newman set bond at $5,000.

After listening to a plea for leniency by the defendant's attorney, Judge Newman said:

"Frankly, I cannot conceive of a case that deserves less consideration."

"There were 13 counts of short weight of the 13 purchases made by the inspectors. If there had been 113 purchases made there might have been that many short weights. On the other hand, if it was merely negligence, it was of such a character as to amount to felonious intent."

Judge Newman then sentenced the defendant to serve 30 days on each count, to run consecutively, and pay a fine of $300 on each count or serve 30 days for each count.

Double Jeopardy

2 Patients, 4 Others Injured When Ambulance Hits Bus

Six persons, including two women being rushed to Emergency Hospital from a previous traffic crash, were hurt yesterday when an ambulance rammed the side of a Capital Transit bus at Connecticut avenue and Van Ness street.

Injured were:

Mrs. Elizabeth Bouve, 25, of 3000 Tilden street northwest, ambulance patient, possible skull and spine fractures, severe lacerations of the scalp.

Mrs. Mary M. Bouve, her mother-in-law, of 109 Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md., ambulance patient, undetermined head injuries.

Dr. Cole Henry, 30, Emergency Hospital ambulance surgeon, possible skull and spine fractures.

Rayford Jones, colored, 32, of 1511 Sixth street northwest, ambulance driver, lacerated forehead and knee injury.

Mrs. Nell Spruce, 39, of 4309 Van Ness street, bus passenger, lacerated head and contusions.

Bertha Ball, colored, 25, of 4210 Thirty-eighth street northwest, bus passenger, lacerated scalp.

All victims except Mrs. Mary Bouve were taken to Emergency Hospital. Mrs. Bouve was taken to Casualty.

According to police, Mrs. Bouve and her mother-in-law were injured when an automobile operated by Mrs. Elizabeth Bouve was in head-on collision at Nebraska and Nevada avenues with another operated by Mrs. Loretta Abbott, of Petersburg, Va. Mrs. Abbott's machine was overturned and careened into a third automobile parked at the curb.

While Mrs. Abbott was treated by a private physician near the scene, an ambulance was summoned for the other two women. Traveling south on Connecticut avenue, it reached Van Ness street just as a westbound bus pulled into the avenue from Van Ness street.

92-Degree Heat Forecast Today

Washington will have fair weather until Tuesday or Wednesday when generally light to moderate showers are expected, the Weather Bureau said last night in its five-day forecast.

Temperatures will be "considerably above normal" today and tomorrow followed by slightly cooler weather Monday, according to the long-range report. High for today is expected to be about 92.

Maximum temperature yesterday was 88 at 3:30 p. m., and lowest was 64 at 6:15 a. m.

Mother Favors Action

Elliott Roosevelt Volunteers For Service in Army Air Corps

Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, has waited to be drafted, but has volunteered for military service.

He has applied directly to Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, for a commission in that branch, it was learned here last night through one of Elliott's friends.

ELLIOTT

Elliott, who will be 30 next Monday, has taken his physical examination and is awaiting results.

If he is accepted he probably will be assigned to some activity for which he is especially fitted, perhaps in the radio section, or the gasoline procurement section.

Young Roosevelt, it was learned, refused to reveal his intentions officially, telling associates that it would be up to Gen. Arnold to make the announcement.

In fact he had confided only in his parents, President and Mrs. Roosevelt. His mother learned of his plans about the time she told her press conference last Wednesday that the first married men to be conscripted should be those "like my boys, whose families would not starve."

Giving her consent, Mrs. Roosevelt is reported to have told her son, "If you feel that is the right way, then all good luck."

The President, friends said, was asked to "square" Elliott with his wife, the former Ruth Googins, of Fort Worth, Texas, for making the move.

Last night Gen. Arnold would neither confirm nor deny the report about Elliott.

It was thought that if he is accepted, Elliott will be given a commission as captain in the Air Corps and sent to Wright Field to take up his duties. He might go as early as next week.

Over Our Shoulder

Wings Over America

American engineering genius is responsible for most airplane designs and improvements. But, according to relative power in the air, we stop right there. Other countries pick up where we leave off and build the planes. What about American aviation? A new series starting in Sunday's Post tells you all you want to know about "Wings Over America," which, incidentally, is the title of the articles. Nathaniel F. Silsbee, member of the National Aeronautical Association and Air Progress Committee, takes you through the Aeronautical Training Schools right up to stratosphere flying and covers everything in between . . . Army, Navy and Civilian flying, production, commercial air transportation.

Wings Over D. C.

When the preliminary census figures were released a few weeks back the Washington trading area stepped into the big city class with over a million population. But according to the building boom now going on Washington's census figures will be out-dated before the final figures are released. The "Our Town in Pictures" section in Sunday's Post shows you this boom in action. Post photographers took to the air to show you how Washington looks to visitors who come in on planes and came down with four pages of really swell airviews. The other four pages show you how the construction looks to the sidewalk superintendents.

Go West Young Man

We don't know whether Wendell Willkie had Horace Greeley in mind when he set forth on his trip and this is one question that Edward Folliard does not answer in his Sunday article. Everything else you want to know about the Republican candidate will be found in Folliard's article in Sunday's Post. Eddie is aboard the Willkie special sending his stories (uncensored) by wire direct to The Post.

Charles Lindbergh seems to be more popular when he's in the air than when he's on it. His recent radio talks have caused quite a controversy among the listeners. Whether you're for or against Lindbergh's policies, you'll enjoy reading Gladwin Hill's personality sketch on the Lone Eagle in Sunday's Post.

Is conscription the first step toward dictatorship? Or was it the best way of insuring our country's democracy? Felix Morley discusses the pros and cons of the recently passed bill. Hedley Donovan takes over this week and reviews the past seven days of war. The Gallup Poll tells you what percentage of the voters favor aiding England "even at the risk of getting in." The page of cable dispatches and reports from five wire services round out the Sunday Post's coverage of the worst war in history.

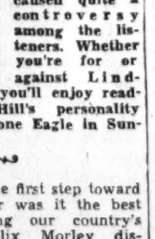
Fashion Guinea Pigs

Who are the best-dressed women in America? Marshall Adams, The Post's Fashion Editor, names them, shows you in words and pictures, why leading New York designers and merchants selected them. This business of being a best-dressed woman is more complicated than you think. Being the tops in style means wearing exclusive creations months before they're released to the general public. If Miss and Mrs. America like them, factories start turning them out by the thousands. Incidentally, ten of the b. d. women are from Washington.

Miss Adams gives the men a break this week and shows them latest styles in hats. But this time they're for father and son.

Hollywood

Got an idea for a musical? Hollywood's willing to listen, says Lucile Neville. Her Sunday article, direct from the movie capital, tells to what extremes producers are going in order to come up with a new idea.



Personality sketches seem to be in vogue this week. Hedda Hopper joins the group with a profile on Marjorie Rambeau, Broadway stage beauty who has just finished "Tugboat Annie Sails Again." (P. S. Hedda is one of the best-dressed women mentioned awhile back.)

Mickey Rooney is not only standing them in the aisles, he's got them lined up along F street this week. What has he got that does it? Producer L. B. Mayer told Louella Parsons who, in turn, tells you in Sunday's Post.

Eight pages of sports, a society and women's section, rotogravure section, all this, and a comic section, too. Yes, there's something for everyone in the family to enjoy in Sunday's Post. Call NAtional 6200 for home delivery.

operator. The count is the son of Count Louis de Tristran of France.

Cates and Mrs. Cates were at the De Tristan home when the kidnaping occurred. Mr. Cates and other members of the family were greatly shaken by the shock and grief.

Nurse Foley, terrorized by the kidnaper, was cut, scratched and bruised in her tussle with him. Dazed, the middle-aged woman stumbled into the De Tristan home, carrying the hat that had fallen from the kidnaper's head during the scuffle.

Gardner Chases Him

Meanwhile, a colored gardner, Albert Williams, who had witnessed the abduction, jumped into his car and pursued the kidnap machine. As he approached, the kidnaper threatened him with a pistol, and in his excitement Williams almost collided with another car driven by Miss Jane Oswald who had been attracted to the scene by Nurse Foley's screams.

Miss Oswald assisted the nurse, and then discovered the ransom note. She hurried with it to Special Officer Charles Paice and Hillsborough police and the FBI was notified of its contents before the family knew of the ransom demand.

The little boy was wearing a red, white and blue striped sun suit and white sandals. He has brown curly hair.

The kidnaper was swarthy, possibly a south European, between 48 and 50 years old, and had a large hooked nose.

Williams said the kidnap car, a black 1936 (Ford) coach, bore California license plates, the first digits of which were 6-E. The State Department of Motor Vehicles checked through almost 10,000 licenses beginning with that prefix. Four pairs of 6-E plates have been listed stolen.

The district in which the De Tristans live is one of the most exclusive parts of the San Francisco peninsula. Their neighborhood is wooded and hilly, and residences are far apart.

HOME OF THE PARENTS OF KIDNAPED MARC DE TRISTAN IN HILLSBOROUGH, CALIF.

Abduction First in U. S. In 16 Months

By the Associated Press

The kidnaping of Marc de Tristan in Hillsborough, Calif., yesterday was the first major abduction in almost 16 months. Only two others of the many perpetrated in previous years remain unsolved by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The FBI in New York announced that it has not relaxed its interest in the unsolved kidnapings of Charles Mattson, 10, in Tacoma, Wash., on December 27, 1936, and of Peter Levine, 12, of New Rochelle, N. Y., on February 24, 1938. Both boys were slain.

F. B. I. vigilance has meant death for kidnapers who killed their victims and long imprisonment for others.

It meant death for Franklin Pierce McCall, who kidnaped and suffocated James Bailey Cash, jr., 5, in Princeton, Fla., on May 28, 1938; for Joseph Sacoda and Demetrius Gula, who kidnaped Arthur Fried in White Plains, N. Y., on Dec. 4, 1937; for John H. Seadlund, who kidnaped and left to die Charles S. Ross, 72, in Chicago on September 25, 1937; for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of kidnaping and killing Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., 20 months, on March 1, 1932, at Hopewell, N. J., and for Harold T. Thurmond and John M. Holmes who were lynched in San Jose, Calif., for the kidnaping and slaying on November 9, 1933, of Brooke Hart.

With few exceptions, imprisonment for kidnaping has been for long terms.

Life sentences were given to the kidnapers of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, of Louisville, Ky., on October 10, 1934; of Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul, Minn., on January 17, 1934; of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City, on June 22, 1933; of August Luer, Alton, Ill., on July 10, 1933; of William A. Hamm, jr., of St. Paul, on June 15, 1933; of Mary McElroy, of Kansas City, Mo., on May 27, 1933.

He Picked a Tartar

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Louis Shattuck Cates, step-grandfather of kidnaped Marc de Tristan, is known as a two-fisted mining engineer of the old school.

He is president of Phelps Dodge Corporation, one of the world's greatest copper companies. He got there the hard way—up through the mine shaft in Mexico, Utah and Arizona. His hair turned white in the process—that happened when he was 24, after a mine cave-in.

Now, at 59, he works in a leather and mahogany office, and is internationally known for his achievements in industrial development and metallurgical engineering.

But he remains an active man. Of medium height, erect, square-jawed and square-shouldered, Cates carries his 216 pounds easily. At his home in Greenwich, Conn., he keeps in condition by horseback riding. Until recently he sailed his S class sloop in Long Island Sound races.

Cates was born December 20, 1881, in Boston, the descendants of a long line of ship captains. His mother put her foot down on the idea that he go to sea.

So he went to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was graduated in 1902, and promptly went underground in a Mexican silver mine. He stayed with the mines until 1930 when he came to New York to head Phelps Dodge.

$100,000,000 in New Pipe Lines Planned

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 19 (AP).—Pipe line construction will reach at least $100,000,000 this year, the largest in the United States in a decade, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

New trunk lines and extensions to old systems will total 6,000 miles, the publication said, pointing out that the 225,000 miles of crude oil, gasoline and natural gas lines is under ground and safe from aerial attacks.

Roosevelt Attacks Rule by 'The Few'

cated "free and unhampered elections" and went on to say:

"On candidates and on election issues—and remember, I am trying to think of this year as if it were 1939—I would rather trust the aggregate judgment of all the people in a factory from president to the laborers than the judgment of the few who may be financially interested."

The President asserted that even today, in certain quarters, there are demands for a return of government to the control of "those few, who, because of business ability or economic omniscience, are supposed to be just a touch above the average of our citizens."

While they should have credit for pure intention and high ideals, the Chief Executive said, nevertheless "their type of political thinking could easily lead to government by selfish seekers for power and riches and glory."

In Germany, the President asserted, the people a decade ago despaired of democratic processes based on the free use of the franchise and gave an ear to the new cult of "Nazism" which he said offered a better government through the rule of a handful which professed a purity of purpose.

But subsequently, Mr. Roosevelt said, the right of free elections and the free choice of heads of government suddenly were wiped out by a new regime, still professing purity of purpose.

His address, coming after an inspection of key Philadelphia units in the Nation's $15,000,000,000 defense program, climaxed the University of Pennsylvania's 200th anniversary celebration.

Defense Work Speeded

Before the speech, the President spent nearly two morning hours inspecting the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the skyscraper Naval Hospital here, and the Army quartermaster depot.

He told newsmen his Navy yard visit convinced him that the United States has learned the art of speed in an emergency. Warship and plane construction at the yard, he said, was going ahead at a much faster tempo than a year ago.

The President drove 5 miles from the Navy yard to the auditorium through the heart of the Nation's third largest city—cheering crowds, estimated at 100,000 by W. A. Landvoigt, chief of the Secret Service's Philadelphia force, greeted him along the way.

Not a seat was empty in the auditorium as the President, in a black academic robe, moved onto the stage with Mrs. Roosevelt. He began his speech after receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws.

After his address, Mr. Roosevelt boarded a special train for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to spend the week-end.

Arrives at Hyde Park

Married Men, Too, Face Conscription

men, air fields and tent camps for 40,000 more will be provided under the bill, which was immediately sent to the White House. Construction of adequate housing for the men is the controlling factor in expanding the Army's man power.

Additional funds for the draft are expected to be voted by the House early next week. Administration expenses as well as money for paying, clothing and feeding the men were asked by President Roosevelt last Saturday and are now being considered by the House Appropriations Committee.

Officials estimated that some $1,640,000 a month will be required for clerical help engaged in administration of the draft throughout the country, while about $1,500,000 is expected to be spent for printing of registration forms alone.

A definition of the term "dependent" in the Conscription Act caused the reversal of a previous statement by selective service officials that all married men will be deferred.

The measure authorizes the deferment of men with dependents and defines such as "an individual (1) who is dependent in fact on such persons for support in a reasonable manner, and (2) whose support in such a manner depends on income earned by such person in a business, occupation, or employment."

Draft officials were of the opinion that the local boards would interpret this broadly and doubted if many married men would be called for the time being.

Officials also said that men in prison are subject to the draft, but will probably escape actual military service. Under proposed regulations wardens would register men upon their release, but present law bars felons from service.

The War Department said all men inducted into military service under the draft and National Guard mobilization would be fingerprinted, a practice in the Army since 1906.

U. of Pennsylvania Honors Canada's Chief Justice

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.—Canada's chief justice, Sir Lyman Poore Duff, receiving the honorary degree of doctor of laws along with President Roosevelt at the University of Pennsylvania bicentennial, said today that the people of London and Britain would "stand successfully against the merciless enemy of freedom."

"With fire and sword, but also with a deep sense of service, the peoples of the British commonwealth of nations, with the help of those among their former allies who have retained their freedom, are today defending these ideals," he said.

"The people of London and Britain . . . are moved with a fierce anger, but they are also animated by a spirit of grim determination not only to win this war, but, thereafter, they hope, with the friends of civilization the world over, to apply themselves to the work of rooting out those conditions which prepare the ground for dictators who must make war because their power cannot endure in peace."

Willkie Refuses To Pull Punches

this Administration is not removed from power then the country is on the road to bankruptcy and that road leads to the loss of liberty."

Referring to President and his associates the Hoosier said:

"I never learned anything in that school of sublety that says one thing and means another."

Willkie arrived here tonight to deliver a major address on foreign affairs tomorrow night.

He Sees the Okies

Traveling today through the "Grapes of Wrath" country—the rich San Joaquin Valley, with its fruit farms, vineyards and "Okies"—Willkie encountered predominantly Democratic crowds, and he talked to them about Thomas Jefferson and the Virginian's warning against a third term.

He was cheered and heckled, but always the crowds were big and attentive. The GOP nominee—himself a former Democrat—said that there were "thousands" of men in the United States capable of being President; that the demgoocratic process insured such capable men.

He added:

"And if in this year of 1940 the American people have decided that there is only one man out of 130,000,000, then they are not deserving of this great republic of ours."

He'll Follow Through

The Gallup poll, showing that President Roosevelt has taken a lead over Willkie in 36 of the 48 States, was shown to the Hoosier this morning. If he was dismayed he did not show it.

There may or may not have been any connection, but later in the day it was made known that Willkie is going to continue campaigning without a lull until the night before election, when he makes his final appeal from Madison Square Garden in New York.

It was announced today that he would wind up this current Western swing with a speech at Madison, Wis., on September 27, and would then leave immediately for White Plains, N. Y., where, on the following night he will address the Republican State convention.

Finds Platform Effective

Willkie will then leave for New York City and on the afternoon of September 29 he will leave for Detroit, Mich. He will speak there September 30, and then make a swing through Michigan. He had planned to fly from place to place, but he has now decided that rear-platform speeches are more effective. He will wind up his campaign speech in the East, and probably will make a speech in Baltimore.

Willkie travelled through the "Grapes of Wrath" country today, through California's cotton fields—and "Okies."

The Hoosier candidate found that these dust bowl refugees of John Steinbeck's book had poured into the valley in such vast numbers as to change the whole political complexion of the area.

Bakersfield, Tulare, Fresno—these and other towns along the way turned out for him in large numbers. But Willkie was in Democratic territory, territory where New Deal relief money and California relief money have made Republican workers almost despair of victory.

In his speeches to these predominantly Democratic gatherings, Willkie talked as a former Democrat and a former businessman. He reminded them of the promises of the New Deal and told them that he was proud of having been a success in business.

"You are just like 9,600,000 others in the United States," he said. "You want jobs. I am going to put those 9,600,000 back to work, and when I put them back to work it is going to enlarge the market for the products which you raise here in California."

Willkie's first stop was at Bakersfield, where they were having a frontier days' celebration. Led by Monty Montana, a noted trick rider, Willkie's caravan went to the rodeo grounds, where the stands were filled with men and women in cow boots, dungarees, gaudy shirts and sombreros.

Many in the grandstands were fruit farmers of Italian descent. Two thousand of them had been let off for the occasion by their wealthy employer, Joseph A. DiGiorgio. These men of Italian blood said that members of their racial group in California—and there is a large number of them—would vote almost solidly against President Roosevelt in November, because of his "stab-in-the-back" remark at the time of Italy's declaration of war against France. They said they regarded themselves as good Americans—some of them of the third and fourth generation—but felt that Mr. Roosevelt had gone out of his way to reflect on people of Italian blood.

Cheered at Fresno

At Fresno, Willkie was cheered by many when he asked whether any Democrat would vote against him "because I am advocating that no man should occupy the office of President for three terms."

Willkie was showered with confetti and paper streamers as he drove through Fresno streets.

"It makes no difference whether you vote for me or vote for the candidate who is running for President on the other ticket," he said. "Anybody can look at a crowd like this and tell that democracy in America still functions. . . . I appeal to you not upon any narrow basis of partisanship. This is not a fight between Democrats and Republicans. This is a conflict between those who believe in the philosophy of the New Deal and a third term and those who do not."

3,000 Tanks, 300 Bombers Ordered

Army and Navy Let Contracts Amounting To $528,106,479

The Army and Navy placed orders yesterday for arms amounting to $528,106,479, including contracts for 3,000 tanks, more than 300 big bombers, and 24 small warships.

At the same time, the War Department announced plans for strengthening the defenses of the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic seaboard with four new air bases.

Award of the huge arms contracts coincided with a statement by the Navy Department that it did not plan to use the "draft industry" authority provided in the Conscription Act, but probably would exercise authority granted to demand priorities on naval orders and would "conscript those materials or commodities under contract for delivery to nonessential purposes."

Four-Engine Bombers Ordered

The tank order was the largest in history and more than twice that of any previous award. Numbers to be purchased were not made public, but it was unofficially estimated that about 2,000 "medium" tanks weighing about 25 tons and approximately 1,000 light tanks of 12 tons were involved.

Likewise the War Department announcement of the plane order simply stated that an $85,800,000 contract had been let to the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif., for planes and spare parts. It is understood that something more than 300 four-engine bombers make up the order.

The Army announcement of the four new air bases said they will be in the vicinity of Augusta, Ga.; New Orleans, La.; Tallahassee, Fla., and West Palm Beach, Fla.

Secretary of the Navy Knox, home from a quick inspection of the fleet and of naval bases on the West Coast and in Hawaii, announced the award of naval contracts totaling $40,921,324. They included a $6,502,008 order let to the Electric Boat Co., Bayonne, N. J., plant, for 12 motor torpedo boats and 12 patrol boats, speedy craft for the "mosquito fleet."

Ammunition Sought

Other contracts were for shipbuilding facilities and ordnance material from ten teel companies.

Including the $75,758,245 tank order, the Army awards for ordnance totaled $386,279,499. Largest contracts were with the Western Cartridge Co., of East Alton, Ill., $89,873,337, and the Remington Arms Co., Bridgeport, Conn., $88,700,000, for small-arms ammunition.

The Savage Arms Corporation, of Utica, N. Y., received a $27,166,283 order for small arms and the Ravenna Ordnance Works, of Ravenna, Ohio, a $28,000,000 ammunition contract. Two large awards for production of smokeless powder were placed with the Radford Ordnance Works, Radford, Va., $24,550,000, and the Indiana Ordnance Works, $23,050,000.

In connection with the new Air Corps bases, it was said that a pursuit group will be stationed at Augusta, a tactical unit approximating one group at Tallahassee, a bombardment group at New Orleans and two pursuit groups at West Palm Beach, Fla. Details as to construction at each base will be announced later, it was said.

Other Contracts Listed

Other War Department contracts during the day included a $10,863,000 plant to be constructed at Wilmington, Del., for production of TNT and DNT. It will be constructed by the Stone & Webster Engineering Co., of New York, and operated by E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. A $4,242,655 contract was also let for the construction of a second National Guard camp at Alexandria, La.

Secretary Knox disclosed that in maneuvers off Hawaii, the U. S. S. Clark, a destroyer on which he was witnessing the war games, was theoretically sunk under him in a night attack.

The Gallup Poll

Defense Pace Satisfies 8% More Voters

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 20.—One of the chief arguments Republican spokesmen have leveled against the Democratic Administration of President Roosevelt in the present campaign is that the New Deal's handling of the defense program has been slow and inadequate.

A new survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates today that this particular Republican argument is gaining little headway with the voters thus far, however.

The survey shows that half of the voters with opinions about our defense still are dissatisfied with the rate of rearmament. But many who were undecided or without definite impressions about the question a month ago now say they are "satisfied" with defense efforts.

In its successive surveys the Institute asked a cross-section of the voters in each State:

"Are you satisfied with the present rate of production of airplanes, tanks, warships and guns for our national defense program?"

Nineteen per cent, or approximately one voter in five, said they had no impression as to the country's defense progress or were undecided about it. The vote of all those interviewed in the survey was:

SATISFIED	40%
DISSATISFIED	41
No Impression or No Opinion	19

In the Institute's survey last month the vote was:

(Month Ago)

SATISFIED	32%
DISSATISFIED	40
Insufficient Information or No Opinion	28

Whom would the public blame for defense delays? The Institute's survey indicates that, justly or unjustly, most of the present dissatisfaction is being leveled at "the Administration," "Congress" or "the politicians."

Only a small minority blame business or industry for what they consider to be unnecessary delays. The tabulated replies were:

(Blaming)

1. Administration, Roosevelt, the Government	14%
2. Congress, the politicians	11
3. Industry and business	3
4. Public apathy, the people themselves	2
5. All others	3
No reply	8
	41%

Although a greater proportion of Republicans express dissatisfaction with defense progress than Democrats, the question is by no means a strictly partisan one, the survey shows. The vote by parties is:

	Satisfied	Dissatisfied	Don't Know
Democrats	46%	36%	18%
Republicans	32	48	20

De Tristan Boy's Kidnaper Described as 48 and Swarthy

The following is a description given by police of the principals in the $100,000 De Tristan kidnaping in California yesterday:

The kidnaper—Swarthy, South European, large hooked nose, about 48 or 50 years old.

The victim—Maro De Tristan, jr., 3 years old, light brown curly hair, fair complexion. He was wearing a red, white and blue striped sun suit and white sandals.

The signature "Unconventional Eccentric" on the De Tristan ransom note recalled that the kidnapers of George Philip Weyerhaeuser, in Tacoma, Wash., in 1935, signed their missive "Egoist Egoist."

The Weyerhaeuser lad's kidnapers were captured. However, the kidnaper and killer of another Tacoma boy, Charles Mattson, 10, in 1936, is still at large.

The Mattson kidnaper is described as near middle age; 5 feet 9 or 10 inches tall; weight about 175 pounds; complexion very dark, swarthy, and may have had a small mustache; dark hair; accent, apparently Slavonian or Austrian.

1,000-Room Hotel To Be Built Here

Statler Chain Plans $5,500,000 Building On K and 16th Sts.

A new 1,000-room hotel is in prospect for downtown Washington, The Post learned yesterday. Its estimated cost is $5,500,000.

The hostelry, featuring a banquet hall with a capacity of 2,000 diners, is expected to be the newest addition to the Statler hotel chain and its reported location will be along the east side of Sixteenth street northwest, between K and L streets. Thus, it will be a neighbor of the Carlton and Mayflower, two of the Capital's leading hotels.

Occupying the block at present are a half dozen houses originally built as private dwellings. One has been converted into headquarters of the American Trucking Association.

Disclosure of plans to erect the hotel, which would have a nine-story facade on Sixteenth street and probably additional height on K street, where zoning regulations are less strict, followed the arrival in Washington of Samuel Tyrol Wheeler, New York broker and representative of a New York syndicate sponsoring the enterprise.

An office building in the proposed hotel section is contemplated in the general plan, it was learned.

As plans stand now, the new Statler Hotel would have a depth of 200 feet on K street, extending to an alley west of the Investment building, and a depth of nearly 190 feet on L street.

A. R. Class, of Washington, and the Chicago firm of Holabird & Root, who were associated architects on the new Lafayette Building, Fifteenth and H streets northwest, have been mentioned as architects for the new hotel.

U. S.-Canadian Board Pushes Alaska Survey

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 20 (Canadian Press). — The Canada-United States Joint Defense Commission, which Brig. K. Stuart, senior Canadian service member, said had come to some very valuable conclusions with regard to future defense measures," will leave today to complete a tour of defense points on the Pacific Northwest and Alaska.

STUART

The commission made an aerial survey of the coast of British Columbia and Alaska yesterday in three United States Navy planes.

Stuart said the board might hold a full meeting shortly after completion of the tour. A meeting of the Eastern board is scheduled for October 2 in Boston.

Burbank, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP).—A fast new interceptor-pursuit plane for the Army—the P-38—was flown from Union Air Terminal today in what the Lockheed Aircraft Co., manufacturers, described as its first trial flight. Performance figures were not revealed.

The twin-engined warplane, with 52-foot wingspread and 38-foot fuselage, was recently described by the chief of the Army Air Corps as capable of flying in excess of 500 miles an hour. The Army has ordered 52,000,000 worth of them from Lockheed.

Poulsbo, Wash., Sept. 20 (AP).—This North Kitsap County village (pop. 1,000) did its bit for national defense. Fifty-four of its young men went en masse to Camp Murray and 49 of them were accepted for enlistment in the Washington National Guard. They will form the nucleus of a new, highly mechanized, antitank unit.

The mass enlistments resulted in one store losing four of its clerks, left some fishing boat crews short handed and also handicapped other enterprises.

The Political Arena

98% of American Labor Party For Roosevelt, Tobin Believes

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Daniel J. Tobin, taking over his duties as chairman of the Labor Division of the Democratic National Committee, said today he believed at least 98 per cent of American labor, representing more than 20,000,000 voters, would support President Roosevelt.

TOBIN

Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers (A. F. of L.), said he had talked with leaders of both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O., and "every one of them," including John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, assured him they were "100 per cent behind the President."

He said that although Lewis might not come out openly for the President or campaign for him directly, because of the press of other business and his ill health, "I have his assurance, as well as that of his chief lieutenants, that they will do all they can to be helpful."

Pittsburgh, Sept. 20 (AP).—Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin predicted here that Wendell Willkie will get "the biggest labor vote—organized and unorganized—that the Republican Party has ever had since the days of the full-dinner-pail campaigns.

"If the election were to be held today," he added, "I am confident that Willkie would win, and I believe the margin of victory will be greater in November than it would be today."

Martin said it was tentatively planned for Willkie to make his "major labor speech" in Pittsburgh the first week in October.

LetDraft Board Work Freely, Hershey Urges

Pleads With Citizens To Keep Local Units Rid of Pressure

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive officer of the joint Army and Navy selective service committee, said today it was every citizen's obligation to "prevent pressure of every kind" on neighborhood draft boards.

"The decentralization of this (conscription) operation is a recognition of local self-government," he told the United States Conference of Mayors at its convention. "A man is chosen for military training or service, or deferred for important work, by his neighbors."

He said these neighbors were so important that every citizen should "make it his responsibility to demand honesty and efficiency from every selective service official and to prevent pressure of any kind upon these officials for any purpose except to encourage and sustain them in . . . their duties."

Knudsen Is Speaker

William S. Knudsen told the mayors that considering the time in which it is to be accomplished, the national defense program "is probably the biggest attempted by any country since the World War."

Knudsen, in charge of the production division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, addressed 200 members of the conference at the second session of their three-day meeting.

"We are making progress," he said, "even if we have a long way to go before we have enough of everything.

"We must have patience while tools are being made, so we can get pieces (of armament) later on, but don't let us get an inferiority complex and beat our chests or tear our hair. America can produce, if we all hold and retain faith in this, our country."

Warns of Vigilantes

Knudsen said more than 80 per cent of Navy material requirements had been ordered with funds made available last July 1, and 73 per cent of Army material requirements have been placed with funds made available at the same time.

Vigilante groups should be discouraged from fighting Fifth Column activities, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson told the conference.

"I appreciate the fine spirit of many patriotic citizens and organizations which leads them to volunteer for work of this kind," he said. "But the real work of this kind is not work for amateurs; it is not the work for private agencies. It cannot safely, it cannot properly be entrusted to men outside of government groups."

Pike Urges Small-Business Investments

New SEC Member Assails Bankers' 'Shortsightedness'

Special Dispatch to The Post

Portland, Me., Sept. 20.—Securities Commissioner Sumner T. Pike, a Republican, tonight excoriated the investment banker for "not seeing beyond his nose" and in the same breath declared "I can't understand why an SEC hasn't been in existence 60 years rather than six."

Pike, newest member of the SEC, is reported in line for the SEC chairmanship if Chairman Jerome Frank resigns to take an expected Federal judgeship appointment.

Address Maine Brokers

Pike addressed the Maine Investment Dealers Association in this Republican stronghold.

He said that "the insatiable appetite of the life insurance companies for bonds" was more the cause of the investment banker's troubles than Government regulation.

Investment bankers, he charged further, are "raising a false issue" when they blame "their predicament" on the Securities Act.

Pike said that insurance companies, which can bid for new securities issues at a fixed price and a fixed time, are taking much valuable business away from the investment bankers.

He cautioned Insurance companies, however, against loading up with too many bonds, stating that a policy of accumulating too many high-grade bonds might turn out to be "a real headache for American business." One danger, he said, was that insurance companies might acquire all the good bonds, leaving only second rate issues for banks, trust funds, the general public, colleges and other endowed institutions.

Challenges Imagination

Pike advised investment bankers to go into the field of small or moderate-sized business which, he said, "challenges" the investment banker's imagination today.

This field, Pike declared, "has been comparatively neglected by the investment banker."

Enforcing his defense of the SEC, Pike concluded:

Sen. Byrnes Declares Willkie Is Lacking in Experience

Denies 'Indispensability' of Roosevelt Is Issue in Campaign; Vance McCormick Calls Third Term 'Example of Hitler Ideology'

By Robert C. Albright

In the Administration's first detailed defense of the third-term race, Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, last night assailed the "inexperience" and campaign statements of Wendell L. Willkie and asserted Mr. Roosevelt doesn't regard himself as "the indispensable man."

Byrnes, third-term floor manager at Chicago, said in the present emergency "the people are not concerned with any theoretical discussion of a third term or whether any man is indispensable." He accused Willkie of "irresponsible" statements and said the sole issue is whether Willkie or Roosevelt should be the next President.

Shortly before, Vance C. McCormick, who was chairman of the Democratic National Committee in Woodrow Wilson's 1916 race, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that "this so-called experience" of the President "has proved costly to the country."

Points to Europe

One of a half-dozen witnesses to testify against a third term, McCormick said the net result of the present world crisis "might be less devastating to this Nation and its way of life than the violation of an approved tradition like the third term with its encouragement of the very sort of one-man or totalitarian government under which Europe is suffering today."

Meanwhile, Oren Root, jr., president of the Willkie-for-President clubs, told the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee that not more than $3,000,000—the Hatch Act limit—would be spent in the campaign to elect Willkie. Two other witnesses working for Willkie said they were abiding by the spirit of Hatch Act limitations.

To Keep in Limit

Root said Willkie had asserted his intention of keeping outlays of all the Willkie groups within the $3,000,000, despite possible loopholes in the Hatch Act. He said Willkie would "stand by that statement."

The youthful Willkie Club organizer said his group of clubs was operating independently of the Republican National committee on both finances and policy and as a matter of fact had been "a thorn in the side" of both the National and State Republican committees. The associated clubs, he said, will spend under a $1,000,000 ceiling fixed for them by Willkie.

John Orr Young, New York advertising man, who sponsored a series of magazine advertisements urging formation of Willkie-for-President clubs, said his efforts had no relation with Root's group or the Republican National committee. He said both had given him "the cold shoulder." Young estimated he would not spend over $100,000 advertising to reach 30,000,000 potential readers.

Can't Take Chance, Says Byrnes

Mort V. Pach, 64-year-old New Jersey "practical politician" charged with calling the Hatch Act an "imaginary law," said, "I didn't mean it if I said it," and apologized. Pach said he had opposed joining by a club he formed of other Willkie-for-President clubs because of the requirement for reporting all contributions and expenses. He said his "little club" would not raise more than $10 or $15.

Senator Byrnes, in his nationally broadcast third-term defense, said the Nation under existing conditions "cannot take a chance upon inexperience."

"Would you," he said, "needing the services of a lawyer to save your property or a physician to save your life, "believe it fantastic to employ a man with years of experience instead of a man with no experience?"

Charges Profanity

Asserting there was no possibility of Willkie's election, Byrnes accused the Republican nominee of referring "contemptuously" to the President, and of using profanity in a campaign speech and with making "irresponsible statements."

He said the American people recalled how President Roosevelt acted under the stress of the 1933 emergency, but "they do not know how Mr. Willkie would act under grave stress and strain."

Byrnes said Willkie's own freedom of speech was proof that the Roosevelt Administration did not curb it and declared "it is this right to exercise free speech that is proving his undoing."

"Neither the delegates nor the people knew Mr. Willkie," said Byrnes. "Through his speeches they have come to know him. They have heard him question the veracity of Mr. Roosevelt and refer to the President as 'this fellow.' . . .

Saddened by Chicago Words

"It was as unpleasant to me as it must have been to millions of Americans, to learn that Mr. Willkie as he left Chicago resorted to profanity and consigned that American city to the lower regions. It was not pleasant to read that on the same day in speaking to workers at industrial plants, Mr. Willkie liberally sprinkled his remarks with profane words."

Before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee, former Democratic Chairman McCormick declared a third term would set "such an example of Hitler ideology before Central and South America these nations may conclude that as between totalitarian government in the Americas and in Europe there is no choice."

McCormick coupled his testimony for limitation of White House tenure with an attack on the "experience" third-term argument. He said this Administration's "experience" has achieved neither national unity nor preparedness and "certainly this experience is not manifest in business management of the Nation's affairs, so essential to preparedness and defense."

Jefferson Hayes Davis, a grandson of the President of the Confederacy, another Senate committee witness, told of how the Confederate constitution provided a single six-year term for President, because of 'fear of the power of a political party or of the power of a single man or both."

Stanley I. Stuber, editor of the United States Baptist, told the subcommittee that Catholics, Protestants and Jews should unite in sponsoring a constitutional limitation on the White House term, because "implications of the third-term issue strike the hardest at free religion."

Edward T. Lee, of Chicago, dean of the John Marshall Law School, said "it is deplorable that the incumbent of the Presidential office should have seen fit to inject into the present situation the issues of his own personality and the measures advocated by him in his Administration, both of which have seriously disturbed the country."

House Democrats To Vote on Leader

McCormack Calls Caucus to Name Rayburn Successor For Wednesday

House Democrats will be called into caucus for election of a majority leader late Wednesday afternoon, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, caucus chairman, announced yesterday.

McCormack issued the call after 50 House Democrats signed a petition to force one. The petition, circulated by Representative Schulte, of Indiana, was presented to McCormack by Schulte, Representative Fries, of Illinois, and Representative Larrabee, of Indiana.

McCormack, whose backers claim enough pledges to elect him to the vacancy created by Representative Rayburn's elevation to the speakership, is opposed to postponement of the showdown, but a countermove may be launched in the caucus to adjourn action until January.

There are six entries in the race—Representatives McCormack, Woodrum of Virginia, Cooper of Tennessee, Boland of Pennsylvania, Rankin of Mississippi and Somers of New York.

First Official Plane Landings at National Airport to Be Made Wednesday, With Roosevelt Laying Terminal Cornerstone

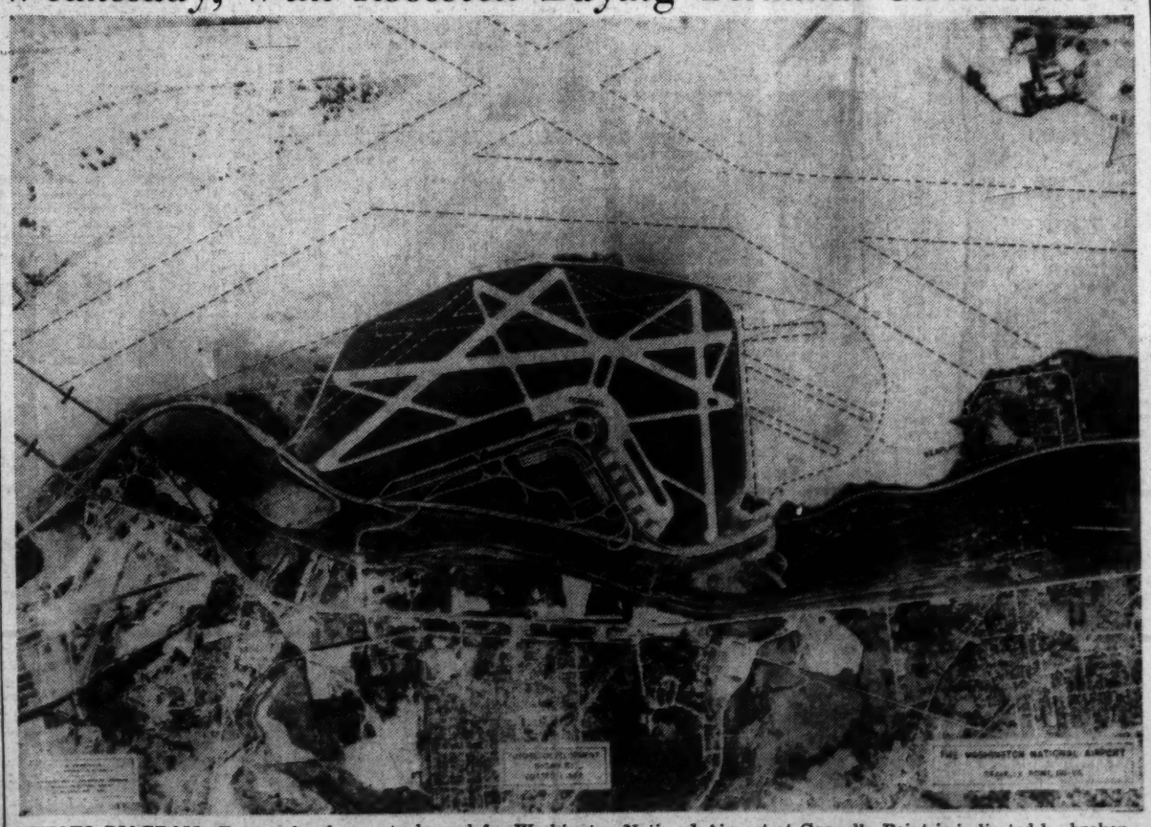

PHOTO-DIAGRAM—Future development planned for Washington National Airport at Gravelly Point is indicated by broken lines. Additional runways may be added

The first official plane landings at Washington National Airport will be made next Wednesday afternoon, followed by laying of the cornerstone of the terminal building by President Roosevelt, the White House announced yesterday.

Postponed from last Tuesday, due to the death of House Speaker Bankhead, the ceremonies will begin promptly after the President's scheduled arrival at 3:10 p. m.

As a prelude to the gala premiere, which is expected to be witnessed by thousands, engineers in charge of building the $13,000,000 airport yesterday escorted the press on an inspection tour of the four great runways and the half-completed terminal building.

Led by Col. Robert S. Thomas, chief of the Army Engineer's office for this district, and Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the Interdepartmental Engineering Commission, which is supervising the vast project, reporters previewed the airport from one end to the other.

They saw under construction the elaborate terminal building which, with its fancy dining room and cocktail lounge, probably will be used by as many pleasure seekers as air travelers; the parking areas with their combined capacity of 5,000 cars; the runways and roads, which are equivalent in area to a four-lane highway from Washington to Baltimore, and the first of six hangars planned for the port.

Forty-six hundred men, approximately 3,700 of them PWA workers, were on the job yesterday, rushing operations to achieve the goal which has been set for formal dedication and full use of Washington National Airport. This will be December 17, the thirty-seventh anniversary of the Wright brothers' first flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

At present, said Col. Smith, the four runways are 90 per cent completed. All of the north-south landing strip—6,855 feet long and 200 feet wide—is available for use, as is most of the northwest-southeast runway, which will be 5,310 feet long and 200 feet wide.

These two will carry 75 per cent of all landings and take-offs. The other two runways are 150 wide, the northeast-southwest being 4,892 feet long and the east-west 4,100 feet in length.

"There is more runway area actually available there now," said Col. Smith, "than at any other airport in the Washington area."

Leaving the White House at 2:55 p. m. on Wednesday, the President will drive over the main north-south runway on his way to a specially built elevation in front of the terminal building where he will give the signal for the first airplane landings.

A fleet of seven transport ships bearing officials and distinguished guests will then come in. They will be followed by a plane from each of the airlines serving Washington—American, Eastern and Pennsylvania-Central. Next in turn will come aircraft representing the Army, Navy and Coast Guard.

Next, the President and his attendants will proceed to a small grandstand at the rear of the terminal building where he will lay the cornerstone and give a short talk. Admission to the grandstand will be by card. The public will be admitted to the surrounding area.

"We will be glad to have the public there," said Col. Smith, "because, though this area is in anything but a completed state, it is far enough along to show what a center of attraction it will prove when completed, with its landscaped lawns rolling down from the new location of the boulevard to the edge of the flying field."

R. A. F. Sets Great Fires on Channel

Blasts Ems Canal Aqueducts; Sub Sinks Nazi Troop Ship

By the Associated Press

Dover, Eng., Sept. 20.—British bombers returned tonight to heavy assault upon the German-occupied French coast, from Calais to Boulogne.

Bright bursts of flame, plainly visible across the Channel, rose through the gauzy mists, suggesting that new costly fires had been started in the area where the German army has assembled masses of invasion machinery and men.

Above the blasts of bombs, shell bursts and clusters of searchlight beams showed the Nazis were putting up a hot resistance.

Earlier today, official sources declared that ice-sheathed British bombers had struck three devastating blows at one of the vital links in Germany's internal waterways network official sources disclosed tonight.

Bent on burning out Hitler's "invasion arteries" at their roots, the Royal Air Force dive bombers, in the face of gales of rain and sleet, smashed for hours last night and early today at the great aqueducts which carry the long Dortmund Canal over the River Ems near Munster. The air ministry said they effectively disrupted the repair work which the Germans have been pressing following earlier attacks.

This daring night foray into the heart of Westphalia was only one of a series of attacks on German road, railway and water communication systems, on the Channel ports where Hitler has massed his "invasion fleet" of barges and troopships, and on airdromes in and out of Germany. From all these raids, the air ministry said, all British planes returned safely.

Moreover, the kingdom's "silent service," the admiralty, gave official support to earlier reports that His Majesty's submarine Sturgeon had sunk a 10,000-ton German troopship off northern Denmark with a reported loss of 4,000 lives nearly three weeks ago.

Practice Landing Exercises

British estimates that 200,000 German troops are methodically practicing landing excercises on the Norse coast gave added point to the systematic work of both R. A. F. and navy in striking at the roots of these offensive forces.

The British bombers were over familiar ground in their thrust at the long canal which runs from Dortmund to the German North Sea naval base of Emden, for they had reported much damage in previous attacks and one flight lieutenant had won the coveted Victoria Cross for his attack on the Munster aqueducts last month.

"Last night," said the air ministry news service, " . . . sticks of high explosives were dropped across both the aqueducts. At least one burst was clearly seen on the structure.

"Nearly an hour later another shallow dive attack was made.

"Again a stick of high explosive bombs crashed across both aqueducts and an observer saw clouds of dust drifting away after the explosion.

"Just before 3 a. m. another raider . . . made his attack. He could see both aqueducts clearly as his bombs were unloaded."

Of the earlier attacks on the Channel ports, the service said:

"Driving rains which often turned to sleet shrouded the Channel ports. Nevertheless, another successful attack was made on Ostend (Belgium) and new fires were started.

"One was at the north end of the main basin and another near two rows of warehouses which had caught fire by the time the raiders left.

Barges Attacked

"Barges were attacked in the new tidal harbor and despite intense searchlight glare, a later raider saw a large fire burning on the quayside.

"The Dunkerque docks were also attacked from a low level, in spite of intense antiaircraft fire.

"Other squadrons bombed the railway yards at Mannheim and Ehrang, the goods yard at Neckarau, 4 miles south of Mannheim, and main railway lines at Coblenz.

"Attacks also were made on a bridge over the Rhine, near the Trier Canal, between Veere and Middleburg, in Holland, and airdromes at Munster, Mansdorf and Bergen."

The attacks on the Channel ports lasted three hours, said watchers on the Dover cliffs. The coast from Calais to Boulogne appeared to be one solid wall of fire, they said.

The admiralty's story of the Sturgeon's feat on September 2 was the first official claim to the sinking of the transport, earlier identified as the Marion. Swedish reports have stated that nearly 4,000 men were lost when the ship blew up in the Kattegat but this was denied by the Germans. The German radio acknowledged, however, that a troopship named the Pioneer, in service between Germany and Norway, had "suffered some damage" in the Kattegat, "but not as the result of enemy attack."

For the Sturgeon it was a voyage of vengeance, for her sister submarines, the Starfish and the Seahorse, were sunk on the same North Sea patrol last January.

The admiralty said the troopship was attacked in difficult weather while she was being escorted by small naval vessels and planes. It added:

"Torpedoes hit the enemy transport . . . There were brilliant flashes of flame and a dense column of black smoke. . . . Two minutes later the whole ship burst into flames. . . . When H. M. submarine Sturgeon came to the surface some time later the transport had sunk and German escort vessels were sweeping the water with searchlights in search of survivors."

Surrender or Die, Mexican Band Told

Chihuahua City, Mexico, Sept. 20 (AP).—Gen. Antonio A. Guerrero, commander of the Chihuahua state military zone, today sent an ultimatum to the leader of a rebel band, reported surrounded by federal troops in the hills 80 miles south of here, to surrender in 48 hours or die. It was believed that 150 men remained in the rebel force.

Experts Believe Cloud-Buster Of Nazis Is Infra-Red Ray

Experiments Carried on in U. S. Recalled; Fliers Sent Out Views of Airport By Television From Miles Away

Mysterious cloud-piercing rays, which the Nazi air force yesterday claimed its planes are using to finger their way through British fog to London, may have been foreshadowed by experiments conducted here almost a year ago.

If the connection between the Nazi's newest "secret weapon" and local experiments designed to further safety in aviation exists, as radio engineers here believe, the new weapon is a combination of infra-red rays and television. That the combination would permit pilots to see through fog has been proved; its serious application to flying appeared remote, though, on the basis of experiments so far completed in this country.

The most probable answer to the German claim, said a Washington radio engineer, who insisted on anonymity because "this is pure supposition," is the use of infra-red searchlights on the planes, which also carry television iconoscopes. With the searchlight beams, invisible to the naked eye, the pilot feels through the fog to the ground, then focuses his iconoscope tube on the spot picked out by the searchlight.

The "pickup tube," said the engineer, "would have to be more sensitive than anything yet developed or the searchlight would have to be much more powerful. But the Germans may have accomplished a great deal under pressure of the exigencies of war."

Red flares dropped from the planes, as described by Londoners, might quite conceivably have some relation to spotting ground objectives with infra-red searchlights, the engineer said. What the fancy noses on Nazi planes may mean, or what connection they might have with infra-red rays and television, he would not venture to guess.

Use of television between air and ground was first tried out publicly in October, 1939, when an airplane flying 22,000 feet over Washington received pictures from the ground. Later a much more ambitious experiment was tried out by radio and aeronautical engineers.

March 5, 1940, an airliner flew from Washington to New York photographing the landing field there long before it arrived. At New York, the plane flew at 4,000 feet over Manhattan's skyscrapers, picking up and transmitting through haze pictures of exceptional clarity to television receiving sets on the ground.

At that time, Tom Hardin, chairman of the now defunct Air Safety Board, said television held out hope of penetrating fog and said it might soon be possible to transmit pictures of a landing field to incoming aircraft by television and infra-red rays.

Nazis Claim Rout of Attackers

turned back in night battle by German defense planes, it was said.

The other wave, attempting to reach Hamburg from Helgoland Bight, was said to have been attacked and scattered over the mouth of the Elbe River.

The claim was made by a spokesman of the air ministry after hundreds of Nazi bombers, resuming large-scale assaults on the London area, were reported to have blasted Britain's vital network of railroads extending southward from the besieged capital.

The heavy bombing attack, aimed at isolating London from Dover, Folkestone and other points along the coast, was said to have been carried out in the face of strong resistance by British fighter planes.

So enthusiastic is Marshal Goering over the new secret ray, it was stated, that it is believed it may lead to the "crushing" of London and the British Isles no matter how severe the weather may become.

The weapon closely resembles a miniature television set and is installed next to the pilot's seat in big bombers. It is called the "cloud-Roentgen" by German fliers because it X-rays clouds and blinding rain as though they did not exist, the air ministry spokesman said.

The newly equipped "cloud-busting bombers" of Goering, it was explained further, are of the type with brightly painted noses which already "have become famous to the London air defenders because of their pretty noses."

These painted noses, often mistaken for the insignia of specific German air squadrons, were said to be for a far more practical purpose—the paint being mixed with a specially prepared chemical which serves as a conductor or lens for the X-ray apparatus within the plane.

The air ministry spokesman refused to go into detail regarding the purported secret weapon, but said that "the whole idea is reminiscent of the use of infra-red rays in the filters of cameras in order to eliminate fog and other disturbing atmospheric conditions."

He maintained, however, that the principle of the "pretty plane noses" is an entirely new German invention and has nothing to do with infra-red rays.

[Recent London dispatches have mentioned the appearance over London of big German bombers with brightly painted noses.]

The new X-ray equipment, it was maintained, will go far to overcome the difficulties of the weather in the bombing attacks on London and other British objectives.

Reminded that three or four weeks ago German air force quarters predicted that the Royal Air Force would not be able to hold out another two weeks against the Nazi mass blows, informed quarters admitted that these hopes had not been realized, but blamed it on the weather.

They said that the new-type anti-aircraft barrage tried out over London earlier this week lasted only about three days and now has been abandoned, apparently because of the vast cost of throwing hundreds of all size shells into the sky every minute.

DNB today told of great fires burning in the London area, including the districts of Cannington, Stockwell and northward and eastward of the loop in the Thames.

Many railroad junctions south of London were said to have been bombed Friday.

Next Move Synchronized

Berlin, Sept. 20.—While official German silence is still maintained on the results of the Rome conference between Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, authoritative German comments indicated the two main points that had been under discussion: First, that the war against England has "entered its culminating phase;" second, that "it is the duty of the Axis powers to fill the vacuum which will be left by England's collapse, notably in the Mediterranean and Africa."

Authoritative German quarters express belief, therefore, that a partition of Africa among Germany, Italy and Spain, has been decided upon in Rome, in all detail. This, it is indicated by the press, was the substance of the political discussions. The military phase of the confegence, it is indicated, was for further coordination and synchronization of German-Italian moves. It is emphasized, in this connection, that the "force of military measures will be increased, their tempo accelerated, their purpose confined to the attaining of total victory."

The official German communique, issued at midnight, emphasizes there is an "absolute agreement of views on the question discussed; also, in regard to the future prosecution of the war which has arrived at the climax which can be considered fully satisfactory. Regarding the problem of the Balkans and Africa, as well as the relations of the Axis powers with Spain, it may be said that naturally all were acute problems, and, therefore, these questions likewise were discussed."

Japan Softens Her Demands On Indo-China

Talks With Vichy Regime Are Renewed After Breakdown

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 21 (Saturday).—The government of this French colony announced late last night that Japan had modified her demands for "limited" military facilities in Indo-China and conversations were being resumed with an agreement expected.

During the day, negotiations had broken down and the head of the Japanese military mission had said plainly that the world now could look for a "crisis."

Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of the Japanese mission, who had announced he was leaving for home, remained in Hanoi with some of his staff.

Earlier in the day, in pursuit of the Japanese government's avowed concern that there be no "unfortunate incidents" when its troops march into Indo-China, about 100 Japanese civilians had left Hanoi in a special train for Haiphong.

By way of leavetaking, they stood on the station platform and under the musical leadership of Japanese Consul General Rokuro Suzuki, raised their flat, determined voices in the Japanese national anthem, the "Kimigayo":

"May His Majesty's reign last ten thousand years . . ."

U. S.-Singapore Deal Reported Discussed

The United States was reported last night to be considering an informal British offer to permit United States naval vessels to use the British naval base at Singapore.

Officials were believed to be canvassing the question whether acceptance of the offer would be a stabilizing factor in the Far Eastern situation.

Secretary Hull, in describing today the broad scope of recent conversations with Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, and Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister, would say only that Singapore may have been mentioned. But he asserted that no negotiations were involved in these talks.

Other informed sources said the talks were of an exploratory nature to determine what measures might be taken in the Far East in the face of Japan's pressing demands upon French Indo-China and threatened southward expansion drive.

Bad Is Good

Weather May Stop Nazis, Army Men Say

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Just returned from a military mission to London, a group of United States Army officers expressed the view today that so long as gales and bad weather continued around England actual invasion was not only unlikely, but might be "impossible."

Brig. Gen. George Strong, assistant chief of staff of the War Plans Division, acted as spokesman for the group, which included Col. Carl Spaatz, chief of the plans division of the Army Air Service, and Maj. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commanding chief of the General Headquarters air force.

During the month the officers were in London they witnessed 70 air-raid alarms and between 40 or 50 actual bombings in and around the British capital.

Gen. Strong reported that from his observation military damage done by German bombers was comparatively small. He said that if present tactics were continued by the Germans at the same rate it would be a year or more before the air blitzkrieg became "a serious sort of thing."

German bombings, he said, had not "affected the British morale at all. When I left, day before yesterday, apparently the British were quite prepared to stick things out along present lines."

British Claims Conservative

British reports of German plane losses "are on the conservative side," added Gen. Strong, who arrived on Pan American Airways' Yankee Clipper. He said he had verified the official score by observation and check-up and said he had learned that last week-end 192 Nazi planes were downed, whereas the British reported the number at 189.

Despite the almost constant German raids, he continued, the Royal Air Force "is well off and in trained personnel and equipment is better than it has been in the past."

Lone Dutch Flier in R. A. F. Gets Revenge

KOENE D. PARMENTIER
His Revenge Is Sweetest

Family Destroyed, He Bombs Nazis In Nightly Raids

By Devon Francis.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 20.—A one man air force in the person of a Dutch flier whose family was wiped out at the start of the Nazi offensive through the Low Countries last May is carrying on nightly "vengeance" raids against German military objectives in the Netherlands.

The airman is Koene D. Parmentier, former chief pilot for the Royal Dutch Airlines. His raids have been directed principally against Rotterdam, where his family was killed during the crushing Nazi bombing forays which signalized the start of the spring blitzkrieg, and The Hague and Amsterdam.

After each raid he drops a signed note overboard to advise the Dutch inhabitants, for their own protection, where he will strike the following night.

I first ran into the story of Parmentier in Bermuda two weeks ago. Today I confirmed it in American aviation circles.

It is reported, but unconfirmed, that the Nazis have placed a price equivalent to $10,000 on his head.

When the Germans invaded the Netherlands, they leveled certain sections of Rotterdam with bombs. Of the 60 pilots in the Royal Dutch Airlines, 40 were put into uniform for air defense. All were killed.

Of the remaining 20, Parmentier escaped, first to France and then to Lisbon, Portugal. There he mingled with the flying fraternity of the port. He said he was going to repay the Germans many fold.

He got to England and offered his services—with qualifications. He was to have the use of Dutch planes. He was to make his raids alone. He asked nothing but supplies of bombs and fuel. The Royal Air Force agreed.

For weeks now, regardless of weather, he has carried on his vengeance flights. He leaves by the clock and returns by the clock, stalking off without a word after he lands.

Brief Voyage

Many Nazis Reported Lost on Barges

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Sept. 20.—Ten thousand fully equipped German soldiers have perished off the Netherlands coast in recent weeks when their self-propelled barges were sunk by British submarines, it was reported today by several Dutch passengers arriving from Lisbon on the American export liner Exeter.

Their report was the first received here indicating that such practice maneuvers had been attempted by the Nazis from the Dutch coast. Last week passengers arriving here told of German losses while attempting similar exercises off French Channel ports. One Netherlands officer reported also that hundreds of German troops had rebelled against such suicidal practice and had been sent back to Germany as prisoners.

Several passengers on the Exeter said that the German soldiers, burdened by their heavy equipment, were forced to leap into the sea at distances varying from 1 to 2 miles from the Netherlands coast and to swim ashore.

Repeatedly these barges would be torpedoed by British submarines, they continued, and thousands were left floundering in the water. Later their bodies would float ashore, the passengers reported.

French Threatened Britain With War, Germans Declare

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—The German wireless, in a broadcast picked up today by N. B. C., asserted that Paul Baudoin, the French foreign minister, had told the British government France would declare war on Britain if the six French warships which recently passed through Gibraltar were bombed or molested.

On September 18, the authoritative British Press Association reported in London that three French destroyers and three French cruisers had sailed past Gibraltar the week before for Dakar, west Africa.

They were permitted to pass, it was added, after the British authorities had been notified of their destination.

Soviet-Nazi Deal Seen In Cotton Shipments

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Cotton experts said today private investigation indicated that U. S. cotton now being assembled in Texas for shipment to Russia was probably a link in the Russo-German deal to supply the Nazis with raw materials.

About 18,000 bales of cotton are headed for Houston and Galveston wharves for shipment to Vladivostok, probably next week, according to Texas reports. One observer said Russia had probably already shipped cotton to Germany and was buying U. S. cotton to replace her own supplies.

Americans in London Worried by Lack Of Sandbags Around Washington, Lincoln

By Robert P. Post.

London, Sept. 20.—Americans over here are a little worried about George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, who seem to be forgotten by the British government.

Before the blitzkreig started British officials looked around at London's statues and decided to sandbag some of them in for the duration of the war. They built a good strong cushion around King Charles I at Charing Cross, and provided for King George II at the Royal Naval College in Greenwich.

They took James II right off his pedestal and carted him off into the country with the graceful figure of Eros from the Piccadilly. They tucked in a mysterious Dr. Young in the public record office though people at the department of works today could not say who he was, but somehow they overlooked Washington and Lincoln.

Saint Gauden's statue of Lincoln stands in Parliament Square. A copy of Houden's statue of Washington, presented to Britain by the Commonwealth of Virginia, looks out on Trafalgar Square from the garden of the National Gallery. In the midst of marching soldiers by day and terrifying screams of bombs by night they look wonderfully serene.

The Bishop of Chelmsford, Dr. Henry Wilson, is a little dissatisfied with the tone of Mr. Churchill's air raid sirens. In his monthly letter to the Chelmsford diocese today he said "the air raid siren has no note of gay defiance. It utters a depressing wail like the cry of a lost soul and its psychological effect is profoundly bad. I have often thought that an air raid warning which had a note of cheery defiance would save us all a great deal of unnecessary distress."

"I am not merely flippant when I suggest that a gay cock-a-doodle-doo, repeated a half dozen times, would be in the nature of a whistle to keep our courage up instead of a doleful wail which depresses all but the most stout-hearted."

Varna, Bulgaria, Sept. 20.—At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, the Bulgarian army will cross the former Rumanian frontier into the rich wheat-growing district of Southern Dobruja, signalizing the final stage of the recovery of territory this country considers was stolen from her 27 years ago. For the last few days civil authorities have been penetrating the region to maintain order. However, the actual taking over will commence with military occupation. It is scheduled to be a gala event. The entire nation is already celebrating the first concrete results of the consistently revisionist policy the government has maintained since the last war.

Bucharest, Rumania (Saturday), Sept. 21 (AP).—The Iron Guard private police early today arrested 16 gendarmerie officers it accused of strangling the Iron Guard leader, Corneliu Codreanu, and 13 of his followers two years ago.

In a mystery-shrouded inquiry into the "martyrdom" of Codreanu, the pro-Nazi guardists were said to have learned that his executioners received 4,000,000 lei (then about $40,000 as special compensation for kidnaping the 24 guardists from the prison of Rrmnik-Sarat, strangling them in a woods and burying them in quicklime.

The regime of former King Carol reported the Iron Guardists were shot to death when they attempted to escape while serving terms for treason.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Investigation of German war prisoners in Canada has shown that a number of them are graduates of a German school organized for the specific purpose of teaching prisoners how to escape, Canadian internment headquarters stated today.

Preparing in advance for their soldiers' being captured, the Germans held classes in lock picking, tunneling and other ways of breaking out. In one Canadian camp there are at least 20 men who have learned scientific ways of opening locks without keys.

Two of them are members of the Gestapo.

Three Officers Assigned to Aid Cox With Draft

Maj. Sidney Morgan, Maj. Walter S. Welsh and Capt. Hugh Everett, jr., have been ordered to active duty as assistants to Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox in administering the draft law in the District. All are members of the state staff, District National Guard.

Maj. Morgan is secretary to the Tariff Commission, Maj. Welsh is an employe of the Veterans Administration and Capt. Everett is assistant engineer with the Southern Railway. Their orders are effective at once.

Draft headquarters will be established in the District National Guard Armory, Gen. Cox said, for the administrative and clerical staff. Local boards will be set up in 24 districts, where 47 schools will be thrown open October 16 for the estimated 95,000 Washington men between 20 and 36 to register. Registration will be handled by a volunteer corps of about 4,000, recruited chiefly from the public school staff.

Choir Singer Beaten to Death, Suitor Hunted

By the Associated Press

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 20.—Slain a month befeore her scheduled marriage, the battered body of Madeline Clark, 44-year-old choir singer, was found floating today on the surface of this city's reservoir.

A medical examiner's report of "murder" caused State police to broadcast a call to "arrest and hold for questioning on a murder case" Sylvester Dellear, 51, who was known to have been attentive to the victim but was not her fiance.

An automobile, the front seat bloodstained, was found on the shore and a bloodstained hammer lay near the driver's seat of the car. Assistant District Attorney Harold R. Goewey announced he had been informed Dellear was Miss Clark's escort when she left choir practice at St. Helene's Chapel in nearby Lenox last night.

Latin Loan Bill Sent to President

$500,000,000 Is For Credits, Billion To Finance Defense

By John B. Oakes,
Post Staff Writer

An Administration bill authorizing $1,500,000,000 in loans to Latin America and for national defense purposes received final Senate approval and was sent to the White House yesterday.

The measure increases the lending power of the Export-Import Bank by $500,000,000, primarily for Latin-American loans, and it permits the RFC to borrow an additional $1,000,000,000 to help finance various aspects of the defense program.

As originally passed by the Senate, the bill dealt only with the increased authorization for the Export-Import Bank. But the conference report, approved yesterday by vote of 33 to 21, accepted the House recommendation for the larger sum, which had been requested by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones.

$558,000,000 Committed

In a letter made public by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, sponsor of the bill, Jones revealed that the RFC has already made commitments totaling $558,609,290 for loans and investments for national defense since June, when it was authorized to do so.

The Defense Commission, Jones added, "has advised that other commitments in substantial amounts will be necessary."

The RFC, Jones said, has already made commitments of $145,000,000 to build up a raw rubber reserve through the Government's Rubber Reserve Co.; $105,000,000 for a reserve of tin, antimony, manganese and other strategic minerals through the Metals Reserve Co.; $53,000,000 for a reserve of high-test aviation gasoline through the Defense Supplies Corporation, and $5,000,000 for construction of Government plants and purchase of machinery for manufacturers with War or Navy Department orders, through the Defense Plant Corporation.

[Private firms have obtained the balance of the RFC commitments.]

Senator Wagner declared that the RFC at the present time has the "totally inadequate" authorization of $500,000,000 for all purposes.

If the authorization of an additional $1,000,000,000 should not be granted, "you would leave the RFC flat," the New Yorker warned his colleagues. The Defense Commission finds new needs "each day" for the RFC's financial power, Senator Wagner added.

Senators Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, attacked the proposal on the grounds that the extra $1,000,000,000 could be used by the RFC "for any purpose," not necessarily for the national defense. The authorization constitutes "an evasion" of the Constitution, Senator Adams contended.

Money to Stop Nazis

The $500,000,000 additional lending power to the Export-Import Bank is intended in part to fight Nazi economic and political penetration of Latin America, the Senate was told.

The loans would be used for development of resources needed for American national defense; for promotion of American trade with Latin America; and for aiding Latin American nations to avoid "distress selling" of agricultural commodities at ruinous prices.

In originally urging passage of the measure, Senator Wagner emphasized the danger of Nazi inroads below the Rio Grande, which, he said, would be facilitated if this country showed itself unwilling to assist the Latin American republics.

Twenty-nine Democrats, one Independent, one Progressive and two Republicans, Senators Gurney, of South Dakota, and Vandenberg, of Michigan, voted for the conference report; and eight Democrats, 12 Republicans and a Farmer-Laborite voted against it.

Fate of Africa Settled, Rome Told

Italy and Egypt, Spanish claims on Gibraltar and part of the North African coast. "English subornation" in France and among the French "deserts" and British-Turkish "maneuvers against the Italian-German armistice commission in Syria."

One Fascist observer said, "The problems of southeastern Europe are watched always with great attention and a spirit of collaboration to exclude that sector from interference and intrigues."

Whether this was a reference to Britain or Russia or both went unexplained.

The accent on Africa seemed to be based on a belief that the war with Britain had reached a decisive phase with the intensified bombardment of England tied in with the Italian offensive in Egypt.

The Italian high command acknowledged today that British bombers were harrying Italian forces with raids scattered from the Libyan-Egyptian coast to Ethiopia and Somaliland, striving especially to prevent consolidation of Italian positions already 60 miles within Egypt.

If the Egyptian invasion should succeed, Italy would be in a dominant African position from Tunisia eastward to the Suez Canal.

Lest anyone suspect that Mussolini might be asking more in Africa than Hitler is willing to concede, or vice versa, Italians insisted there was nothing but harmony and "identity of views."

Geneva Sees Peace Move

Geneva, Sept. 20.—Possibility of a final peace ocensive, timed to follow a conquest of Egypt and Axis seizure of control in the Mediterranean with the help of Spain, is seen in certain quarters here as a result of the Rome talks between Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and Premier Mussolini.

French Glumly Tighten Belts As Drastic Rationing Begins

Vichy Regime's Order Gives People Less to Eat Than German Conquerors; Awful Price Paid for Petain Surrender

By John Lloyd
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Vichy, France, Sept. 20.—The French public, face to face with "the consequences of war and defeat in all their tragic reality," heard the doleful news today that it must tighten its belt drastically beginning next Monday.

Severe rationing for both occupied and unoccupied France was announced by the government, which gave as its reason the destruction and deterioration of harvests and livestock in the war zone, poor grain crops, an "enormous" drop in milk production and the British blockade.

Here's how the diet of the French people is affected:

No one will be allowed to eat more than 12.6 ounces of meat a week—less than the size of one good American steak. This includes beef, pork sausages and any other kind of meat, canned or fresh, and means there will be only about two normal meat dishes every seven days.

No one will get more than 1.75 ounces of cheese a week, and 3.5 ounces of rice a month.

Frenchmen will be allowed 12.4 ounces of bread a day—but it must be bread at least 24 hours old, unless the present rule prohibiting sale of fresh bread, to discourage taste for it, is revoked.

Grown-ups may have 17.6 ounces of sugar a month and each child may have 26.4 ounces.

There will be no pure coffee at all—Only 10.5 ounces a month of a "mixture," which is very much mixture and very little coffee, for each individual.

[In comparison with the French restrictions, the German war diet provides for one pound of meat a week and the same amount of sugar a month.]

The soap supply will be limited to slightly less than 4.5 ounces a month for each person. This must include soap for washing clothes as well as bathing.

Ration tickets for all rationed foods served in restaurants starts September 30—a week after general rationing goes into effect.

The government called on Frenchmen to accept the sacrifices "with courage, discipline and dignity."

It asserted the Germans had promised to take from the occupied zone for the army of occupation only the grains needed for bread and only part of the meat required for Nazi troops.

Chicken, other fowl and rabbits were not mentioned in today's announcement. If these items, in plentiful supply now, remain unrationed they will be practically the only bright spot on a Frenchman's menu.

British Fliers Ambush Nazi Planes

new assault—the fourteenth successive nightly raid—and the city's antiaircraft batteries lifted again the familiar opening curtain to the now familiar melodrama. All about the town their fire burst forth, throwing splintering steel against fresh contingents of Nazi bombers. Loud explosions were heard almost instantly.

Vivid flashes of anti-aircraft fire from all sections indicated the fierce ground defense was general.

The first two bombs were dropped from a low diving plane. Then, after the raid had been in progress for some time, flares ballooned down over central London, making the streets as light as day.

Two bomb explosions followed the flares.

Shortly before midnight, other bombs exploded in districts south of the Thames.

The day's big action was over the southeast coast and this was the pattern of the counterattack of the British defenders:

Just as the German planes crossed the Kentish coast, they were caught between two irregular columns of fire—one rising momentarily from the antiaircraft guns below and then fading; the other opening up from British fighter planes which plunged suddenly from the clouds, places in which they had waited. The invaders were declared to have fled immediately with British machine gun bullets harrying them out across the Channel.

The defense, a logical development of long experiments in the coordination of ground and aerial fire, cheered Britain, and so did the air ministry's assurance tonight that there had been no pause in the Royal Air Force's consistent, nightly bombing of German ports, communications, distribution centers—everything that might be useful to Adolf Hitler in the still-threatened invasion of England.

Thursday and early yesterday, said the ministry, British bombers damagingly loosed explosives over the Dortmund-Ems Canal and on Nazi railway centers and Channel ports where the invasion fleet has been in shelter since the beginning of rough weather some days ago.

The day's German raid on London was minor, and only two bombs were reported dropped, but Nazi bombers likewise were over other areas of the southeast and tonight they were over the northwest as well.

A British official statement last night said Britain had lost seven planes yesterday to four for Germany during the air battles over England.

R. A. F. Rains Bombs for 4 Hours On Italian-Held Egyptian Port

Invader's Forces Scattered in Raid On Sidi Barrani

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Sept. 20.—The Royal Air Force yesterday literally rained bombs on the Italian-held port of Sidi Barrani in a series of raids lasting four hours. This downpour of deadly missiles fell among massed trucks near the town and scattered forces which have been trying for four days to consolidate their newly acquired forward positions.

Meanwhile other raiders struck deep into Libya, a formation of British bombers flying through a curtain of antiaircraft fire to set fire to three large ships in Benghasi harbor, in western Cyrenaica.

At the same time, the railroad near the Diredawa airdrome in Abyssinia was blasted and a field hangar smashed and ignited. Italian fighters took off and buzzed around the raiders like a swarm of fire-spitting bees, but they were kept at a safe distance and caused no British casualties.

Italian warplanes were heard roaring high above Aden, but they were quickly caught up by searchlights which paled the waning moon. Once the raiders were sighted, defending antiaircraft batteries began rapid firing, spotting fiery mushrooms too close to please Italian fliers, who departed after dropping several bombs on the suburbs. Some buildings were shattered, but there were no casualties.

The South African Air Force meanwhile continued its extensive reconnaissance over southern Abyssynia and Italian Somaliland.

Use "Hedgehog" Formation

An interesting phase of the Italian advance has been the "hedgehog" formation employed by motorized units. Protected by scouting tanks that proceed in Indian file in groups of three and four, trucks move up in a massed formation. Lorries bearing artillery form the first line of this formation. These machines also carry antitank and antiaircraft guns.

Behind this line of armed trucks come more trucks carrying troops. When the "hedgehog" meets opposition, the trucks deploy and the guns of the first section open up.

British land mines have taken a heavy toll among the invaders. The three captured journalists said that their car had touched off one and that they had escaped only because of the car's speed.

Commerce Building Current Goes Off an Hour, 16 Minutes

People Are Stranded In Elevators, Fish Swim in Dark Water

When the electric current in the Commerce Department goes off—as it did for an hour and 16 minutes yesterday—the fish butt their heads in the dark, people get to know each other well while stranded in elevators between floors, and everybody eats a cold lunch in the cafeteria.

Like the day of the big wind, the employes will remember it as the day of the big dark. Nine elevators went dead between floors, but the passengers of all but one were rescued at once through the top manholes.

Thirteen persons, ten women and three men, were in a car too far between floors for rescue. They stayed confined the hour and 16 minutes, not knowing exactly what was transpiring. They could hear the horns blowing on the tiny electric cars that skoot about in the completely dark basement of the building, a dismal sound.

Rescued, most of the imprisoned passengers got away in a hurry. They included Robert Sherman, 1440 Chapin street northwest, head of the C. I. O. employes union in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Audrey O'Flaherty, 1444 Juniper street northwest; Regina Rausch, 1514 Seventeenth street northwest; Miss Jessie Spurlock, the elevator operator, and Berniece Henwood and Vincent Esworthy, address not given.

In the aquarium, which has no windows, the fish swam in sudden darkness against their glass barriers. All the cafeteria cooking equipment functions by electricity and cold dishes went on the tables; four printing presses, capacity 8,000 charts an hour, sputtered out of commission, and 50 calculating machines in the Census Bureau—to mention one area—stopped cold.

A short-circuit in one of the elevators caused it.

New Peruvian Air Aide Here Praises Havana Agreements

His Country Ready to Send Military Support to Any Invaded Neighbor, Says Col. Revoredo, 'Lindbergh of Peru'

Peru would consider an invasion of any other South American Republic "an infraction of her own liberty" and would send military support to her neighbors, Col. Armando Revoredo, newly appointed air attache at the Peruvian Embassy, said here yesterday in paying tribute to the agreements of the Havana Conference as a "great work."

Known in his native country as the "Lindbergh of Peru," Col. Revoredo is a 42-year-old former physician who gave up medicine for aviation seven years ago. His change of career is a reflection of his country's interest—"in fact necessity"— in aviation, he said.

Aviation he visualizes as "one of the strongest ties" between Peru and the United States. "The best friendship is a basis of mutual knowledge," he declared, "and aviation is the fastest growing basis of interest between my country and yours."

He added, "the sale of planes to the South American republics by the United States at the present time means control of the market after the European war is over."

Peru sees no danger of invasion, but is neverthless "preparing its defenses well," said Col. Revoredo. German and Italian colonies in the country are growing smaller and weaker, and there is little evidence of Fifth Column activities, he stated.

Germany has not made the economic infiltrations credited to her, he said, pointing out that of the five airlines networking the nation only one is German-controlled, and this—a small line connecting La Pas, Bolivia, and Lima.

"But the best tie between the United States and Peru is the fellowship between their army and naval officers," he said. "Nearly every month officers fly down to Lima from Panama to see us. We greet them warmly. Then we go up to Panama to see them. They treat us well—very well, indeed."

Col. Revoredo paid his first official visit to the Pan American Union yesterday and was received by Director General L. S. Rowe.

Nine Dentists Named to Aid Draft in D. C.

Dental aspects of the coming local draft examinations will be supervised by nine District dentists, members of the Dental Preparedness Committee of the District Dental Association, it was learned yesterday.

The dentists will work as a unit of the recently-organized National Dental Preparedness Committee, headed by Dr. C. Willard Camalier, 3328 Military road northwest. They are: Dr. Arthur B. Crane, chairman; Dr. John R. Hogan, Dr. Harry Caplan, Dr. Robert E. Motley, Dr. Frank B. Netherland, Dr. Howard J. Newton, Dr. Emil H. Sloan, Dr. George Albert Smith and Dr. Harry M. Wheeler.

In connection with the defense program, questionnaires will be mailed out within a week to all registered dentists in the District, Dr. Camalier said last night. Replies will be used to determine which dentists will be available for military service and to classify specialists for use in the defense program. Similar questionnaires will be sent to all dentists in the country by the national committee.

Draft examinations probably will be conducted in cooperation with the District Medical Association, which is scheduled to handle the local tests, according to Dr. Daniel Lynch, head of the District Dental Association.

U. S. Employes Barred Pay if Called by Army

Military reserve officers called from Government jobs to active service must give up their civilian salaries, while naval reservists on similar duty can continue to receive pay for civilian work, Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott ruled yesterday.

Military leave of absence with pay can be granted to Army reserve officers employed by Government agencies only for annual training periods, "as distinguished from active duty," Elliot said. He cited legislation excepting naval reserve officers from this rule.

Under the draft act, Elliott pointed out, military reservists called to the colors would be going for "active duty," not just training duty.

His ruling was made at the request of the Civil Service Commission. They wanted to know whether James E. Hatcher, Army reserve major now holding the $5,600 job of associate chief of investigations for the commission, could:

1. Be given leave without pay during his period of expected active military duty.

2. Receive annual leave with pay to which he may be entitled while away from the civil job.

Elliott said that since the conscription bill specified, that Government workers who are drafted will get their jobs back after military service, they can be given leave without pay for as long as they serve. This, it was pointed out, will save for the employe his accumulated annual civilian leave.

Leave of absence with pay, however, would violate the dual compensation act of 1916 for military officers, Elliott said, while Naval reservists "may receive the compensation of their civilian positions during annual leave, and, also, active pay and allowances when on active duty with the Navy."

National Guardsmen, said Elliott, also could not be paid the salary of their civilian posts for any period of annual leave, while they are entitled to Army pay and allowances "if the combined rate exceeds $2,000 per annum." The guardsmen, he said, "may be, but are not required to be," carried on a civilian Government pay roll in a "nonpay" status during active service under the draft.

Elliott clarified operation of the naval ruling in a decision on leave payments for Lieut. Comdr. Arthur C. Eberhard, PWA official who was ordered to active duty July 15. Eberhard had 66 days and four hours of accumulated leave when he was called, and Federal Works Administrator Carmody pointed out that the PWA would be out of existence by the time Eberhard was likely to return. Elliott said that Eberhard could be paid his salary for the leave due him.

9 Gypsum Men Freed on Oath In Trust Case

Nine prominent industrialists were released on their personal bonds by the District Court yesterday after they pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiring to monopolize the gypsum industry. Five companies, through their officers, also pleaded not guilty.

The case is due to be set down for trial some time this fall.

The defendants were indicted last June after a special grand jury inquiry, which was part of the Department of Justice's Nation-wide campaign against alleged price-fixing and other monopolistic practices in the building industry.

Gypsum has become a vital building material in the last 40 years, being used for laths, wallboard and for other purposes. The grand jury asserted that the defendants dominated the industry by means of patent-pools and license agreements, thus enforcing noncompetitive prices on all dealers.

Those indicted were United States Gypsum Co., Chicago; Ebsary Gypsum, Co., Inc., New York; Certain-Teed Products Corporation, New York; National Gypsum Co., Buffalo; Newark Plaster Co., Newark; Arthur R. Black, Chicago; Warren Henley, Certain-Teed official; Oliver M. Knode, H. Frank Sadler, William L. Keady, Sindey F. Bartlett and Ernest A. Gallagher, all of U. S. Gypsum Co., and Melvin H. Baker and Ralph H. Burley, National officials.

More Children Coming to U. S.

New York, Sept. 20.—The removal of British children from the war zone to temporary homes in this country is under way again after a deadlock since late August, Marshall Field, president of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, Inc., announced today at a luncheon.

A ship carrying children is on the way to North America and three more vessels are scheduled to follow soon. The number of children and the ports of entry are not known. Field said he understood the first ship would bring about 100.

First Things First

The impotence of organized religion, and of Christianity in particular, in opposing what is essentially a moral and philosophical revolution, now translated into realms of war and politics, has long been a source of amazement and concern to many earnest souls. Speaking the other day at the bicentenary conference of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Jacques Maritain, of the Institut Catholique of Paris, gave an explanation of this bitter paradox.

It has arisen, he declared, from conflict and confusion in the minds of Christians themselves. "Confronted by opposite but similarly baneful and destructive forms seeking empire over the world, Christian people ofttimes deemed it necessary to choose among them instead of opposing them all." Thus in their horror of communism, many Christians were persuaded to be tolerant of the other great totalitarian system which propaganda depicted to them as the restoration of order.

This, as M. Maritain points out, is a fallacious application of the principle of "lesser evil." He identifies it with the "political-minded" as opposed to the "Gospel-minded" conception of the Christian Church. In the present crisis, he points out, the Gospel-minded Christian may find himself spiritually closer to "unbelievers devoted to tolerance and freedom" than to the "political-minded" of his own faith.

Between one totalitarian system seeking to annihilate religion and another seeking "to pervert it in depths of souls . . . while pretending to defend it," said M. Maritain, no choice can exist for the enlightened Christain. "Religion," he continued, "is not best served by entrusting its fate to political or semi-political means." Those who seek the establishment of a Christian order in the world must fulfill it first in themselves.

Men of good will in every creed owe M. Maritain gratitude for this lucid exposition of the problem of the modern Christian and for the fervor and logic with which he has resolved it. To a world bitterly in need of the lesson he has demonstrated the danger of confusing means and ends and the necessity, emphasized by Aquinas, of putting first things always first.

Japan And Indo-China

The ultimatum which Japan has sent to the French government fixes a time limit for the settlement of Japanese demands regarding Indo-China. The alternatives open to the French authorities both at Vichy and Hanoi are unpleasant.

To reject those demands might mean an invasion of French Indo-China by Japanese forces. It is improbable that such an invasion could be successfully resisted. Capitulation to the Japanese demands, on the other hand, would be tantamount to turning that extremely valuable French colony over to the island empire.

So far as Vichy is concerned, the decision appears already to have been reached. In a statement to the press on Thursday, Foreign Minister Baudoin declared that, in her weakened position, France cannot alone resist Japanese demands for a military base in Indo-China. Unless the local authorities in that colony decide on a different course, which is possible but not probable, the Japanese militarists are likely to have their way.

Ostensibly the principal reason why Japan wants a military foothold in Indo-China is to undermine Chinese resistance and thus bring to a successful end a war which has gone into its fourth year and which has cost Japan heavily in blood and treasure. But an equally important motive behind Japan's ultimatum is the old and familiar one of land-hunger.

There have been two schools of thought in Japan regarding expansion. One school has emphasized the importance of making the island empire the master of China. The other has argued that Japan's best interests would be served by expansion to the south.

Japanese occupation of Indo-China would be in line with both programs. It would enable Japan to launch a more effective attack on Chinese concentrations in the west and southwest. It would serve as a useful stepping stone for an ultimate attack on the Dutch East Indies, separated from Indo-China by only 600 miles. And, last but not least, it would put into Japanese hands an extremely valuable territory. The region is rich in agricultural and mineral resources. It has extensive rice fields. It also produces rubber, coal, zinc, phosphates and tin.

It is hardly surprising, under the circumstances, that Japan is seeking to capitalize the world situation by hastening to achieve domination over Indo-China. And if she becomes firmly established there, it will be difficult to dislodge her, whatever the outcome of the great struggle now raging in Europe.

Mr. Roosevelt's Defense

President Roosevelt's contribution to the 200th anniversary ceremonies at the University of Pennsylvania was, for the most part, a defense of his bid for a third term. He admirably stated the case for educational freedom. He eloquently pointed to the need for rededication of men to the pursuit of truth. But it was his indirect defense of his third-term candidacy that will probably stick in the public mind.

In brief, the President's thesis was that democracy is in no danger so long as elections remain free. He quoted former President Eliot of Harvard as saying: "No dictator in history has ever dared to run the gantlet of a really free election." Jefferson, too, was brought to the support of the President's viewpoint. The father of American democracy also recognized, according to Mr. Roosevelt, "that it was our system of free, unhampered elections which was the surest guaranty of popular government."

Considering the attacks which are being made upon the President for his third-term candidacy, this statement should undoubtedly be interpreted to mean that there is no risk in continuing a President in office beyond eight years if the people are at liberty to oust him at the end of his next term. The President should know that Jefferson refused to rely upon any such inadequate safeguard.

Jefferson originally favored a single term of seven years for the President. Later he modified his view emphatically to indorse the two-term limitation. Even in his day he believed that the tradition inaugurated by Washington had acquired "the force of precedent and usage." "No pretext," he said, "should ever be permitted to dispense with it."

In our day, as in that of Jefferson, the preservation of free elections is basic. That issue seems to be of current importance, however, largely as it relates to the third term. It is unquestionably true, as the President says, that some Americans at different times in our history have attempted to limit the ballot to certain groups. Today the chief victims of this discrimination are residents of the Nation's Capital and persons unable to pay the poll taxes levied by various Southern States. But the President was silent on both of these specific problems.

It is precisely because free elections are so vital to democracy that the two-term tradition should not be destroyed. For if a President holding the enormous powers now conferred upon our Chief Executives ever establishes a precedent for indefinite tenure in office, he will have the power to prevent free elections. That point seems wholly to have escaped Mr. Roosevelt as he recalled, with patent disapproval, how Hitler rose to dictatorial power.

When a President is responsible for the spending of billions of dollars, when he directs vast regulatory agencies and distributes subsidies to millions of people, when he controls an enormous army of Government workers, he has in his hands the means of continuing himself in office. A Chief Executive devoted to the public welfare would not thus take advantage of the trust the people had lodged in him. But that does not alter the fact that the decision as to the continuation of free elections could be made by one man.

The two-term tradition has become a part of our unwritten constitution because it effectively prevents dictatorship through such abuse of power. The people do not want to leave decisions gravely affecting our form of government to the discretion of one individual. It is safe to assume that if the traditional bar to third terms is broken in November, the Constitution will be amended to avert the dangerous possibilities which Jefferson foresaw and which President Roosevelt now chooses to ignore.

Separate Issues

The Senate has approved the excess-profits-tax bill by a vote of 46 to 22, thus bringing final passage of the measure a step nearer.

Before this vote was taken, the Senators wisely turned down a rider calling for reciprocal taxation of tax-exempt securities. Aside from the very dubious constitutionality of this particular provision, the present bill was obviously no place for it. There is an urgent need to curb the issuance of tax-exempt securities. But that issue should not be used to obstruct the defense program.

A good deal less wisdom was shown, however, in adopting by a voice vote Senator Connally's amendment to enact steeply graduated taxes on wartime profits. It is undoubtedly the sentiment of the Nation that, if the United States ever again becomes involved in a conflict, measures should be taken to prevent war profiteering.

The matter deserves the most careful consideration. But to include such a provision, inoperative until hostilities have actually begun, with taxation of excess profits in peacetime and provisions for the amortization of plants built for defense purposes makes for both confusion and delay.

In the interests of sound legislation, therefore, the conference committee should eliminate the Connally amendment. It should be debated on its own merits when and if the need arises.

Down To Fundamentals

In his address at Los Angeles, Wendell Willkie began the essential task of filling in the details of the policies he hopes to recommend or inaugurate as President. He had previously outlined the objectives to be sought. He had pledged all his energy to the restoration of full employment, to the rehabilitation of our economic system and the building of impregnable defenses. On Thursday night he gave most of his attention to ways and means of accomplishing these ends.

Mr. Willkie makes a very simple approach to the paradox of "idle money by the billions and idle men by the millions." He demands more production and more jobs. But he would not have the Government undertake to establish more factories or to make more work for the unemployed. On the contrary, he proposes to end "industrial stagnation" by clearing the way for private enterprise to function effectively.

The Government's role under this policy would be to encourage greater production through friendly and cooperative relations with both business and labor. Mr. Willkie would clarify and stabilize the rules affecting business. He proposes to eliminate inconsistent policies, limit Government competition to well-defined areas and give business a chance to make a profit.

In the interests of labor he would retain the Wages and Hours Act, also the National Labor Relations Act. But he would have those measures administered "in the interests of the whole nation." While President Roosevelt still puts himself in the role of a militant advocate for organized labor, Mr. Willkie proposes to minimize differences between employers and employes. His chief interest lies in stimulating production for the benefit of workers as well as businessmen. For he is convinced that only by that means can we preserve our democratic system in the face of world revolution.

Mr. Willkie's denunciation of "unscientific, repressive and punitive" taxes gave special point to his indictment of New Deal economic policies. Congress long ago rebelled against some of the Administration's tax theories tending to frustrate the investment of new capital and to penalize business enterprise. Yet the Federal tax system still lays a heavy hand upon those very enterprises on which we must rely for the creation of jobs. Only those who invest their money in unproductive Government bonds receive favored treatment.

Because of the increased need for revenue resulting from the defense program and the imperative necessity of getting men back to work in productive enterprises, the job of overhauling our tax structure is of primary importance. That task, as Mr. Willkie points out, will be extremely complicated. It should have the attention of Congressional leaders, Treasury experts, businessmen, labor representatives and technicians in the field. Mr. Willkie's pledge to set up such a study group, if he is elected, should notably strengthen his bid for votes.

These specific proposals further sharpen an issue of tremendous magnitude in the present campaign. In the face of outside dangers the attainment of greater national strength has become our first necessity. Mr. Willkie would pursue that aim by reinvigorating private enterprise. The only alternative seems to be increased concentration of power in Washington and further extension of Government control over both industry and labor. Only the naive can follow that course blind to the grave dangers it involves for our democratic system and our personal liberties.

Perhaps justice went blind from too much winking.

Why is it that a person who always says what he thinks so frequently thinks of something he shouldn't say?

The law gives the pedestrian the right of way, but the only time he actually gets it is when he's riding to the hospital in an ambulance.

"Don't put off until tomorrow that which you can do today"—for by tomorrow there probably will be a law against it or a higher tax on it.

A Grave Housing Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been here for four weeks and, as yet, have been unable to find a permanent place to stay. Searching for a room proved the most difficult job of any I have ever attempted. There were rooms so filthy, ugly, and foul smelling that I wouldn't keep an animal in them; yet, the owners had the audacity to show the rooms to a fellowman. Many were the times when I was tempted to ask these people if they, themselves, would live in the rooms. Some places had beautiful rooms, ideal in every respect, but the price quoted was enough to make my head spin.

People leasing rooms wield a terrible weapon over the heads of prospective tenants. They know, well enough, that we must have some place to live, and as a result they can name any price. Finally, in desperation, we are forced to accept their terms.

These people don't seem to realize that we, that is the majority of employes, have people depending upon us for support. Naturally, we must set aside a portion of our salaries for that purpose. Then, of course, we have the expense of eating and various other items too numerous to mention. With all these expenses, it is an impossibility to pay the outrageous price demanded.

The only solution would be for the Government to provide lodgings for employes. They are constantly erecting buildings for the employes to work in. Why not construct some for them to use as residences? The Government buildings have cafeterias that are operating at a profit; why not apartment houses?

The sight of large, beautifully constructed Government buildings flanked by slum quarters is a familiar sight in this city, and is a subject of comment on the part of visitors. Even the most impressive of all buildings, the Capitol, is not spared this fate. The slum section is only a stone's throw away, and the only thing that prevents one from seeing this eyesore is the park that surrounds the grounds.

The Government should construct apartment houses in place of these miserable looking dwellings and provide itself with another source of income by furnishing its employes with clean, wholesome rooms.

Mr. Pegler's Spinach

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have often wondered what species of spinach Westbrook Pegler eats, just before he sits down to knock out one of his columns.

I am inclined to think it must be a hybrid of red pepper, alum-root, bitterroot and sorrel. At any rate, reading some of his columns always leaves a sort of mixture of these tastes in my mouth.

I read his stuff every day, and try to picture him pounding it out at his typewriter. I'll bet he slugs that machine plenty—especially when he wrote the one published in The Post of September 18. FRED D. JACOBS.

Religious Persecution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three hundred and fifty Protestant pastors in Germany are expelled from the churches, forbidden to travel or preach, or are consigned to concentration camps.

Christians in Spain today prefer to starve rather than betray their principles, for the sake of a meal or unemployment. Four out of five churches have been closed and all meetings prohibited, with places of worship often being used as dance halls and prisons.

Political liberty will not long endure where religious freedom is a thing of the past. Christianity is as eternal as Almighty God, therefore Hitler's attempt to destroy it will come to naught.

Persecution brings out the best that is in men, even as it reveals the hatefulness of he who persecutes. A CHURCHMAN.

A Sound Economy For War Prevention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The ship of state has been drifting and floundering at sea for many a year like a boat without a rudder. The issue now is whether to allow the ship to drift further into troubled waters and fight the way back, or to use common sense and reasoning to determine scientifically the right and peaceful course, before it is too late.

Political monopoly and greed has been the downfall of every State. The only cure is economics. Where there is discrimination, economy cannot exist. Economic coordination is only possible where there is free competition and free cooperation. This condition no longer exists in the United States, just as it did not exist in Europe, and consequently there is war.

In event of war the past and present psychology is to stop one war by starting another. It is time that common sense was used concerning how to avoid war and restore peace.

The fundamental step is to abolish the authority of every social government to make and carry on a war. No state should have the right to monopolize the sacred lives of its people for this purpose. Allowing this power to any state is the source from which all wars emanate.

No people are free while the shadow of unnatural death hangs continuously over them. When this curse is removed from a nation, it acquires unbeatable strength because its people would be fighting for their own lives voluntarily, if any fighting was to be done.

The United States started out to be just such a nation before it became entangled in provincialism or selfish nationalism copied from the degenerated states abroad. The founders of the United States had escaped or migrated here to create a state where they could live and work in freedom and peace.

It is to be remembered that competing armies and navies do not abolish injustice, and, therefore, they cannot prevent war or create peace. They may, however, aggravate the power of physical force to enforce injustices and to destroy justice.

The mobile armies in the past were and at present are used for invasion, rather than defense. The only way to stop an invader is by being wiser. Restore the freedom, prosperity and peace available under economic conditions. An economically healthy nation is a safe nation. G. SZMAK.

Director, University of Economics Foundation.

Conscripting Wealth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why should not wealth as well as man power be conscripted for war service? This suggestion sounds reasonable but it betrays ignorance of the question. For wealth, which is mostly invested capital, has already been conscripted to an extreme degree. Evidence of this is furnished by the thousands of business enterprises, big and little, which have voluntarily gone out of existence and the multitude of other business organizations which have ceased development and have restricted their operations, because of the confiscatory effect of excessive taxation.

Aside from the higher consideration of justice, the imposition of additional taxes upon capital and industry would be highly inexpedient at this time for it would interfere with the production of wealth which is so much needed. It would amount to killing the goose that lays the golden egg. The Government wisely restricts the open season for slaughter of wild game but the open season for killing the goose that lays the golden egg is never-ending.

Furthermore it should be remembered that the very people who supply the man power for the Army would be called upon to provide a very large share of conscripted wealth. Meanwhile, the Government neglects to make use of its rightful source of revenue, economic or ground rent, the taking of which would have a salutary effect in every way and would fall as a burden upon no one.

President Wilson's Views

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Claptrappers," laborers, aliens and all fellow Americans, please note what a great American philosopher, Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic President, had to say to naturalized citizens at Philadelphia May 10, 1915:

"You can't be an American if you think of yourself in groups. America does not consist of groups. A man who considers himself as belonging to a national group is not yet an American."

May I add, American youth, by all means take advice from your elders, the older the better. Also, obedience to parents, guardians and instructors. Obedience makes peace wherever it abounds—"claptrapping," disaster. KAY RAY.

Roosevelt And Hitler

He certainly does. Both Roosevelt and Hitler speak the same language—the language of hatred, power and force—the language of dictatorship!

The Post Impressionist

Little Booblich

"LITTLE BOOBLICH" was crying bitterly. He had run away from the other children to be alone because he didn't want them to know how he felt.

The hard, relentless cruelty of childhood and the contempt of his playmates cut deep into him and left an open wound. He had tried to match their prowess in play but he always stumbled or fell or was inept in the role of make-believe assigned him and always he was pursued by derisive cries of "Little Booblich! Little Booblich!" So he had come away. He couldn't understand the torture he endured. He knew only that he was deeply hurt by his lack of companionship and he resented, while he practiced, his role of servility to his more capable superiors.

In his present solitude the soft summer day held no charm for him. He didn't notice the lights and shadows that played about him as he cringed on the grass under a tree. His face was streaked with tear stains.

His recent playmates paid no attention to the forlorn figure. They were used to such action by "Little Booblich." Sometimes, when they teased him, he would fly into a hysterical rage and would shout at them. This always brought gusts of derisive laughter from the children and infuriated their victim more and more. Sometimes he was sick for hours after such an outburst. He would go home and lie on his bed, staring about him, while his anxious mother would plead in vain to know what was wrong. He couldn't tell her except to say "They are always teasing me."

"Little Booblich" felt that he was not like other boys. He hated their rough games and their exuberant outbursts. Had he dared, he would have preferred to play with the little girls of the neighborhood, dressing dolls and pretending household duties. But he had tried this a few times only to be teased unmercifully by the other boys. Because of that, he had come to hate all girls and avoid them as much as possible, despite something about them that seemed to reach out for his regard.

AT HOME his mother babied him into speechless resentment. His father, on the other hand, spoke gruffly and sternly to him when he spoke to him at all. The man had watched his boy being made the butt of all the childish pranks, had seen him shrink beneath bullies' blows and offer no resistance and he felt that the child was lacking in spirit and manliness. To instill this in him, the father knew only one method—strict discipline and a hard hand. But it seemed to do "Little Booblich" no good.

Today the child sobbed disconsolately. Finally his weeping grew quieter as he discovered he was no longer noticed by anyone. He felt a resentment because even his crying, which usually brought him the painful flattery of other children's contempt, had failed him. Finally he began playing by himself.

When the other children, tired of their games, decided that it would be sport to hunt up and goad "Little Booblich" into one of his wild furies, they crept silently toward him, anxious to surprise him at whatever he was doing. It was sure to be something unusual and something ludicrous.

They found that he had got a box from somewhere and had managed to collect in it a number of crawling bugs and beetles from the field about him.

He stood, with the box at his feet, watching the bugs scurry about their little prison. If one of the insects paused to rest or seemed indifferent to captivity, "Little Booblich" would promptly prod the inert body, with a stick he held. When this stimulus failed to bring any response, the child would pick up the insect and tear a leg from its body or break off a wing. In one corner of the box there was a little pile of maimed bodies as a monument to this cruelty.

As "Little Booblich" grasped the victims who offended him and prepared to break their bodies he would shout at them angrily, "Why do you not obey me? Why do you not do as I command? It is best that you listen to me or else I shall make you suffer. I am your leader! If you listen to me you shall be released and shall become my followers. If not, I shall destroy you."

THE LISTENING children, hearing "Little Booblich's" words and watching his actions, could not contain themselves any longer. They descended on him with whoops of joy and taunting cries. "Behold der Fuehrer! Hail, General Bug! He is the leader! He is commander of insects!"

"Little Booblich" looked up shocked with amazement. He didn't want the judgment of others nor their ridicule. Tears again filled his eyes. Why could they not let him alone? He was harming none of them. He had a right to control the destinies of his insects.

Suddenly his voice shrilled in hysterical rage. "Go away, I tell you," he shouted. "I will have nothing to do with you. I hate every one of you and I want to be let alone! Go away before I strike you."

But the others only shouted louder. "Der Fuehrer! Leader of insects!" and finally it was "Little Booblich" who fled, trembling and shaken with rage, to his home, where he flung himself on the bed and sobbed again.

For a long time he was known to his playmates as "The leader of insects." But finally they forgot the incident, in their play, and again began to call him "Little Booblich." HENRY EWALD.

Text of President's Address

I AM GREATLY honored to have the privilege of accepting this hood. I am very happy in the present University of Pennsylvania. I cannot say I am wholly happy that the founders of the university chose the year 1740. It might have had that great attribute which I have so long sought of looking ahead and planning. They would have founded the university in 1739 lest the 200th anniversary should fall in an election year. Thereby I, at least, would have been saved much embarrassment, and what I have to say to you today I might have written as readily and easily in the autumn of '39, for even then we were in a period of relapse in the history of the civilization of the world—for in some lands it has become the custom to burn the books of scholars, and to fix by government decree the national forms of religion, morality and culture. In such a time it is more than a mere formality to join with you in celebrating the 200th anniversary of this free and independent institution of scholarship. I am honored in becoming an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania.

The very foundation of this university was concerned with freedom of religious teaching, and with free learning for the many who could not pay for higher education. It was originally proposed as a place where the good and Reverend Doctor George Whitefield might preach his religion without certain difficulties which the old conservatives of Philadelphia threw in his path. Instead, it was desired to make it unnecessary for him to preach in the sun and rain of the open fields, when the doors of the established churches were closed against him. And it was the dream of the founders to make it a source of education to the children of the poor who otherwise would go untaught.

The survival and growth of the university through these two centuries are particularly symbolic of the eternal strength which is inherent in the American concept of the freedom of human thought and action. Here is living proof of the validity and force of single-minded service to the cause of truth.

EVENTS IN the world are making the vast majority of our citizens think more and more clearly about the manner of the growth of their liberty and freedom, and how hard their people have fought and worked to win and to hold the privilege of free government.

With the gaining of our political freedom came the conflict between the point of view of Alexander Hamilton, sincerely believing in the superiority of government by a small group of public-spirited and usually wealthy citizens, and the point of view of Thomas Jefferson, an advocate of government by representatives of all the people, an advocate of the universal right of free thought, free personal living, free religion, free expression of opinion and, above all, the right of free universal suffrage.

Many of the Jeffersonian schools were frank to admit the high motives and disinterestedness of Hamilton and his school. Many Americans of those days were willing to concede that if government could be guaranteed to be kept always on the high level of unselfish service suggested by the Hamiltonians there would be nothing to fear. For the very basis of the Hamiltonian philosophy was that through a system of elections every four years, limited to the votes of the most highly educated and the most successful citizens, the best of those qualified to govern could always be selected.

IT WAS with rare perspicuity, however, that Jefferson pointed out that, on the doctrine of sheer human frailty, the Hamilton theory was bound to develop into government by selfishness or government for personal gain or government by class, which would ultimately lead to the abolishment of free elections. For he recognized that it was our system of free unhampered elections which was the surest guaranty of popular government. So long as the voters of the Nation, regardless of higher education or proper possessions, were free to exercise their choice in the polling place without hindrance, the country would have no cause to fear the hand of tyranny.

At all times in our history since Hamilton, there have been many Americans who have sought to confine the ballot to limited groups of people. A quarter of a century ago, President Eliot of Harvard summarized his views when he said to me,

"Roosevelt, I am convinced that even though we have multiplied our universities in every State of the Union, even though higher learning seems to have come into its own, if the ballot were to be confined to the holders of college degrees, the Nation would go on the rocks in a very few years."

It may seem ungracious for a very new degree-holder to say this to this audience of older degree-holders, but my authority for this view is a great educator, noted for his efforts to disseminate college education throughout the country.

I AGREE with him thoroughly in his estimate of the superior ability of the whole of the voters to pass upon political and social issues in free and unhampered elections, as against the exclusive ability of a smaller group of individuals at the top of the social structure.

On candidates and on election issues, I would rather trust the aggregate judgment of all the people in a factory—the president, all vice presidents, the board of directors, the managers, the foremen, plus all the laborers—rather than the judgment of the few who may be financially interested. On such questions the aggregate total judgment of a farm owner, the farmer and all the farm hands will be sounder than that of the farm owner alone. I would rather rely on the aggregate opinion, on matters affecting government, of a railroad president, its superintendents, its engineers, foremen, brakemen, conductors, trainmen, telegraphers, porters and all the others, than on the sole opinion of the few in control of management, or the principal stockholders.

Only too often in our political history, the few at the top have tried to advise or dictate to the many lower down how they should vote.

Even today in certain quarters there are, I regret to say, demands for a return of government to the control of those few, who, because of business ability or economic omniscience—I took four years of economics while I was an undergraduate at Harvard and all I was taught is not in our textbooks today. The older I grow the less omniscient I become in regard to economics and I think most of us do. People who are supposed to have that ability are supposed to be just a touch above the average of our citizens. As in the days of Hamilton, we of our own generation should give them all credit for pure intention and high ideals. Nevertheless, their type of political thinking could easily lead to government by selfish seekers for power and riches and glory. For the great elite, curtailment or even abolition of free elections might be adopted as the means of keeping them in power.

I can never forget that some well-meaning people have even recently seriously suggested that the right to vote be denied to American men and women who through no fault of their own had lost their jobs and, in order to keep the family and the home going, were working on Works Relief projects.

As long as periodic free elections survive, no set of people can permanently control government. In the maintenance of free elections rests the complete and enduring safety of our form of government.

No dictator in history has ever dared to run the gantlet of a really free election.

THESE FUNDAMENTAL truths have become commonplace among Americans, but it is well constantly to keep them in mind in order to understand what has happened in other lands. A decade ago, for example, the German people despaired of the processes of their democracy, which were based on the free use of the franchise. They were willing to lend ear to a new cult called "Nazism"—a minority group which professed extraordinary patriotism, and offered bread and shelter and better government through the rule of a handful of persons boasting of special aptitude for government. In those days loudly professed emphasis was placed by this special group on their own purity of purpose. Nothing was ever said about abolishing free elections.

You and I know the subsequent history of Germany. The right of free elections and the free choice of heads of government were suddenly wiped out by a new regime, still professing the same purity of purpose. It is a travesty on fact to claim that there is any free choice of public officials in that nation today, or that there ever has been one since 1933.

What Jefferson prophesied might happen in this country if the philosophy of the restricted vote and of government by special class was adopted, did actually happen in Germany before our very eyes.

MANY YEARS AGO, speaking in San Francisco, I pointed out that new conditions imposed new requirements upon government and upon those who conducted government. As Jefferson wrote a long time ago: "I know also that laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind . . . as new discoveries are made, new truths disclosed, and manners and opinions change with the change of circumstances, institutions must advance also, and keep pace with the times."

We must follow that rule today as readily as then, always with the condition that any change in institutions or in economic methods must remain within the same old framework of a freely elected democratic form of government.

I have pointed out many times that Western migration and the free use of unoccupied lands have ended with the advent of the industrial age; that with the changes wrought by new inventions of steam and electricity new relationships have arisen between units of finance and industry on one side and the great mass of workers and small-business men on the other; and that certain Government controls have become necessary to prevent a few financial and industrial groups from harming or cutting the throats of other groups smaller in size but much greater in number.

We have at the same time developed new beliefs in governmental responsibilities to humanity as a whole. It is a relatively new thing in American life to consider what the relationships of government are to its starving or unemployed citizens, and to take steps to fulfill its duties to them.

There are many instruments of social justice which America has forged to meet the new conditions of industry, agriculture, finance and labor—I will not enumerate them, for you know them. These many instruments are the means which our own generation have adopted to overcome the threats to economic democracy in our land—threats which in other lands led quickly to political despotism.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, to whom this university owes so much, realized too that while basic principles of natural science, of morality, and of the science of society were eternal and immutable, the application of these principles necessarily change with the patterns of living conditions from generation to generation. I am certain that he would insist that it is the whole duty of the philosopher and the educator to apply the eternal ideals of truth and goodness and justice in terms of the present and not of the past. Growth and change are the law of all life. Yesterday's answers are inadequate for today's problems—just as the solutions of today will not fill the needs of tomorrow.

Eternal truths will be neither true nor eternal unless they have fresh meaning for every new social situation.

It is the function of education to provide continuity for our national life—to transmit to youth the best of our culture which has been tested in the fire of history. It is equally the obligation of education to train the minds and the talents of our youth; to improve, through creative citizenship, our American institutions in accord with the requirements of the future.

We cannot always build the future for our youth; we can build our youth for the future.

It is in great universities like this that the ideas which can assure our national safety and tomorrow's history, are being forged and shaped. Civilization owes most to the men and women, known and unknown, whose free, inquiring minds and restless intellects could not be subdued by the power of tyranny.

This is no time for any man to withdraw into some ivory tower and proclaim the right to hold himself aloof from the problems and the agonies of his society. The times call for bold belief that the world can be changed by man's endeavor, and that this endeavor can lead to something new and better. No man can sever the bonds which unite him to his society by averting his eyes. He must ever be receptive and sensitive to the new; and have sufficient courage and skill to face novel facts and to deal with them.

IF DEMOCRACY is to survive it is the task of men of thought, as well as men of action, to put aside pride and prejudice; and with courage and single-minded devotion—and above all with humility—to find the truth and teach the truth that shall keep men free.

We may find in that sense of purpose, the personal peace, not of repose, but of effort, the keen satisfaction of doing, the deep feeling of achievement for something far beyond ourselves, the knowledge that we build more gloriously than we know.

Out Of Bounds

AN ELECTION CAMPAIGN at the climax of the greatest crisis of modern times is not an ordinary election campaign. For in the ordinary campaign the fighting words of the candidates and the smearing operations of their henchmen leave no lasting effect. The very fact that the times are ordinary and that the issues are not critical causes the campaign rhetoric to be forgotten. The extravagance of the ins who point with pride and of the outs who view with alarm is part of the ritual, and it is not taken too seriously. But in extraordinary times the foibles of democracy may become deadly vices.

The tendency of all elections is to degrade the discussion of issues as the excitement of the conflict rises. For each side, having gathered in all the voters who support it by conviction, begins to reach out for the cynical, the ignorant and the unstable voters. This is the dangerous phase of an election campaign. For in this phase the temptation becomes greater and greater to ignore the sensible voters who are already committed and perhaps equally divided and to try to catch hold of the more or less lunatic fringe.

It is at this point that partisans are under tremendous pressure to indulge in one or both of the great democratic vices: First, to evade, avoid, and confuse the issues, and to conceal from the people their real views on the questions of the hour; second, to attack the opposition with charges, allegations and innuendo which, if they are believed, must seriously hinder, no matter who wins the election, the return to national unity.

IN EXTRAORDINARY times like these the unrestrained reciprocal smearing is a grave disservice to the Nation. For one of the smeared candidates will be the next President in the gravest period of our history and the other smeared candidate will be the leader of the opposition. We simply cannot afford to have them become irreconcilable personal enemies, each leading violently suspicious factions among the people. This sort of thing just will not do now.

After the election is over, and would to Heaven it were over, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie are not only going to have to get on together but they are going to have to work together, as Hamilton and Jefferson, who had such differing conceptions of government, worked together in the Administration of George Washington. For the things on which they differ are trivial as compared with the things on which they are going to have to agree. We cannot for a moment forget this: What this country is facing is a condition, not a theory, and a condition, moreover, which will require decision, measures, policies that are not accounted for and are not anticipated in either platform, in the past records and the past political beliefs of either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie.

Both men know this. In this respect the country is unusually fortunate. It might easily have been otherwise. But the political managers and political manipulators do not know this, and both men will be pushed, in fact are being pushed, down the slippery slope where in their hearts and consciences they know they should resist being pushed.

THE SPECIFIC DANGER of the present campaign arises out of the fact that each candidate is trusted by an important part of the people and distrusted by another important part of the people. Mr. Willkie has and Mr. Roosevelt does not have the confidence of most of the industrial executives and of the people with property investments. Mr. Roosevelt, on the other hand, does have the confidence of large masses of workingmen and of humble men and women. These are facts, unpleasant facts, but facts which the serious voter will bear in mind. And these facts, I submit, must lead him to the conclusion that campaign tactics which deepen and embitter this cleavage in the Nation are utterly and absolutely deplorable. For once the election is over, the supreme desideratum will be to undo the mischief of irreconcilable division which the election has brought—if Mr. Willkie wins, by having Mr. Roosevelt help him to gain the confidence of Mr. Roosevelt's supporters, and if the President is re-elected, by having Mr. Willkie help him to arrive at a loyal and cheerful basis of understanding with the people who are the sources of Mr. Willkie's strength.

For these reasons we have to measure our words, and subject our instinctive partisanship in a hot fight to restraints and renunciations which are irksome, thankless and, perhaps, unnatural.

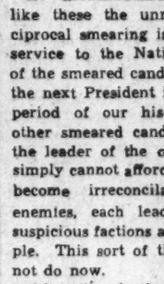
We cannot afford to smear Mr. Willkie as a heartless reactionary or Mr. Roosevelt as the leader of a subversive conspiracy against American institutions. It is not the truth about either man, and it does not become the truth by pretending that some incident, some incipient tendency, some "evidence" dug out of a file, some faintly analogous symptom, is proof of the charge. Campaigning of that sort is out of bounds in this terrible hour, and the people of this country, who will pay the price of national disunion, should resent with a fierce impartiality all political practices which tend to make the conflict irreconcilable and to envenom the legitimate differences between the two American parties and the two American candidates.

Bygone Elections

By Paul N. Furman

Jefferson Beats Adams

Treachery, contest and finally the so-called duel between Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton stemmed from the fourth Presidential election. The Federalist Party was badly disrupted by factional fights between President Adams and Hamilton, who held sway over the Cabinet.



THOS. JEFFERSON

Washington died in 1799, and in March, 1800, Republican papers began to print reasons why Adams should not be re-elected. The Federalists decided to renominate him, however, and Gen. Charles C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, was the choice for Vice President.

Jefferson was the logical candidate of the Republicans for President. He united his friends in support of Aaron Burr for Vice President.

Partisan bitterness and personal defamation ran throughout the campaign. When the electoral college met, both Jefferson and Burr had 73 votes; Adams, 65; Pinckney, 64.

Instead of Burr proclaiming that the contest for President had been between Adams and Jefferson, and that the latter had been chosen, he allowed the question to be thrown into the House of Representatives.

The House was in continuous session seven days and took 36 ballots. The deadlock broke February 17, 1800, when nine States voted for Jefferson. Burr became Vice President.

Hamilton had been open in his hostility to Burr in the contest with Jefferson in the House. Burr's resentment led him to force Hamilton into a duel, in which Hamilton fell mortally wounded at the first fire. Burr died many years later in poverty, unlamented.

Fair Enough

Chicago, Sept. 20.

THE OFFICE of county prosecutor is the most important fort in the defense of any community against organized crime or racketeering. The county prosecutor can withhold cases from grand juries or present weak cases which produce no indictments, and when it is absolutely necessary for the sake of appearances to indict a crook he can throw the case to the gang by mishandling the trial in such a manner as to result in acquittal or reversal of a verdict of guilty on appeal.

This little lecture is by way of introduction to the candidacy of the Hon. Oscar F. Nelson, judge of the supreme court, for the office of State's attorney or county prosecutor of Cook County, which includes all of Chicago and many of the politically obscene little civic honky-tonks along the outskirts.

JUDGE NELSON is a professional unioneer, a mercenary servant of the working staff, who has made a career and a fortune out of his devotion to Labor with a capital L. He is the Republican nominee, but it is my belief that Ed Kelly, the boss of the Democratic gang, will support him in an underhand way in the hope of removing Tom Courtney, the Democratic incumbent, who is no Tom Dewey, to be sure, but is a most unbiddable and unpredictable problem case.

Courtney is a product of the most primitive type of precinct politics, but he has an ornery streak, and he has snapped at Mr. Kelly, who is his political elder and patron. Considering the fact that the Republican Party is only a poisonous parasite on the corrupt Democratic organization in Chicago and Cook County, the latter being, in turn, a horribly swollen tick on the listless and emaciated body of the whole civic unit, Mr. Kelly could support Judge Nelson without loss of prestige among his gang. The Republican organization is no less evil than Kelly's and lives in a notorious state, with the dominant faction accepting favors from the Democrats and refraining from obstreperous conduct.

The Hon. Oscar F. Nelson began his unioneering with selfish but honest zeal 38 years ago as a postal clerk, working a 12-hour night trick in an insanitary building, with one night off each month, for $600 a year.

HE HELPED organize the first union of postal clerks, served for a time without pay as local president and in 1910 sacrificed his job by exposing in the press the wretched conditions of the service. He was fired for doing that. This job was paying him $1,200 a year, but Nelson soon was elected national president, legislative agent and editor of the national union of the clerks at the same salary.

So, to do him justice, it will be admitted that Judge Nelson, in his early days, fought and took risks for the cause of labor.

Times have changed, and Judge Nelson with them. In recent years he has found himself much in the company of underworld labor racketeers, including Al Capone and George Scalise, and, although he insists that his appearance with Capone on a famous occasion was unintentional and insignificant, he is either being naive himself or asking us to be naive.

HE APPEARED in the office of the late Edward Brundage, a Republican leader of the time, in company with two other unioneers, one of them a graduate from the speakeasy business, and conferred with Mr. Brundage in the presence of Al Capone and a Republican State Senator named Serritella, who is an out-and-out underworld politician. Brundage said Nelson, Capone, Serritella and the two others called to ask him, as political patron of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, to intercede with the judge on behalf of Capone, who was due to be sentenced next day for income-tax fraud.

He said the labor skates promised to withdraw labor's opposition to the elevation of Judge Wilkerson to the court of appeals if he would go easy on Capone. Capone got 11 years, and organized labor fought Wilkerson until his name was withdrawn at his own request.

Nelson says Brundage lied, but he asks us to believe that he and his fellow unioneers called on Brundage on political business and, finding Capone present with Serritella, sat there half an hour discussing intimate party matters without asking Capone to withdraw. He admits sitting in with the champion criminal of the times at a political conference.

Judge Nelson concedes that he should be judged on the evidence.

Rail Retirement Pensions Held Not Liable to D. C. Tax

The District may not tax pension checks paid by the Railroad Retirement Board, Jo V. Morgan, one-man District Board of Tax Appeals held yesterday.

A. A. Callahan, 39 S street northwest, a retired employe of the Washington Terminal Co., protested payment of an income tax of $7.52 on the grounds his pension check was exempt from taxation. He was upheld by Morgan, who cited the act of Congress of June 24, 1937, setting up the RRB, wherein it is specifically stated "no annuities or pension payments shall be assignable or be subject to any tax or to garnishment."

The District maintained inasmuch as the income tax law did not specifically exempt the RRB checks, it was the intent of Congress it could be taxed. Veteran checks are specifically exempted in the District income tax law.

Wallace's Views

By Mark Sullivan

Even Opponents Indorse Integrity

MR. HENRY WALLACE is a decent man. When Republican Candidate Willkie, addressing midwest farmers, mentioned Mr. Wallace's name, some in the audience booed. Instantly Mr. Willkie reproved them, saying, "I recognize Mr. Wallace as a fine gentleman and a scholar." That tribute, from a candidate on one ticket to a candidate on the other, reflects the common attitude of persons who strongly oppose Mr. Wallace politically and intellectually. Henry Wallace is a good man.

Yet many who respect Mr. Wallace and have warm personal liking for him, who are quick to affirm that he is a gentleman and a scholar, and quick to indorse his integrity—many such would regret to be obliged to leave the words "honest" and "sincere" as the complete expression of their final judgment about Mr. Wallace, as potential Vice President, and hence potential President. They would desire space in which to make a more complete picture, a picture which would detract no iota from Mr. Wallace's character, but would include some traits of his personality which might become important if he were President. The complete portrait painter would wish to include Mr. Wallace's strong bent for experimentation—a trait which has led him into extraordinary personal experiments with food, resulting sometimes in detriment to his health; which has led him also into spiritual experimentation, resulting in a succession of different church affiliations; and has led to an intellectual experimentation carrying him into queer explorations of mysticism, including numerology and astrology.

And if the complete portrait painter were to include an expression of judgment about values, he might say that integrity is a quality we take for granted, that equipment for public office depends upon other qualities, and that good intentions alone are not an adequate equivalent for sound practicality. As to sincerity, the portrait painter might raise a query. The value of sincerity depends upon just what the individual is sincere about. When we find in the career of one individual a succession of different sincerities, having separate directions, sometimes contradicting each other, we are obliged to recall the value of stability and permanence.

Mr. Wallace's genuinely high qualities include candor. He will give the answer that is in his mind, even when the answer will result to his detriment. One feels like asking Mr. Wallace why was it, in his acceptance address, he mentioned Hitler 23 times, as the symbol of what America must oppose—but mentioned Stalin not at all. One wonders what was in Mr. Wallace's mind, perhaps subconsciously.

And one speculates about an episode of Mr. Wallace's present campaign trip. In a Minnesota town, as the incident is related by Time, a listener in Mr. Wallace's audience spoke up: "'The trouble is, there is no limit to the (Government) spending.' Henry Wallace replied that when private capital does not flow, Government funds must be expended."

Does Mr. Wallace realize that this answer he gave amounts to a formula for carrying America into Government ownership of everything, into economic collectivism, and the dictator form of government that accompanies economic collectivism?

Let us follow the succession of steps by which this comes about:

Pass laws and regulations, and adopt a Government attitude, which make it difficult or impossible for private capital to flow, private industry to function.

Then charge private capital with wilfulness—say that private industry is on a "sit down" strike.

With this excuse, engage in great Government borrowing and spending, without corresponding taxation.

This further increases the handicap upon private capital, makes it still more difficult for private capital to function.

And so on in an endless chain, with private capital less and less able to function; Government taking over more and more of industry; the public debt always increasing. The end is what Mr. Roosevelt described, and warned us against, during his first week in office, on March 10, 1933:

"Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger."

Does Mr. Wallace see that this is happening to America? And does he resist it?

Books And Things

Col. House's Story

HE WAS a little man, soft-voiced and gentle-mannered; he had almost Mongolian cheekbones and almost no chin. And, in a manner and to a degree which has been debated in scores of memoirs and may be debated as long as there is a United States, he made history. Arthur D. Howden Smith, who, as a newspaper reporter, first met the man in 1913, says that he "never met a man whose personality so strongly impressed me." That is evident on every page of Mr. Smith's book, "Mr. House of Texas" (Funk & Wagnalls, $3.50).

"This man is a greater American than Theodore Roosevelt," Howden Smith said to himself as he walked away from the house in East Fifty-third street. That Col. House was a far greater man than Woodrow Wilson he never doubted; and his book is in part a reply to what others have written about the famous friendship. Mr. Smith became Col. House's confidant; in the Texan's old age, Smith helped photostat those famous letters in which Woodrow Wilson poured out his faith and affection to his "dear friend"—letters now deposited in the Yale Library, but which Mrs. Wilson would not let Col. House or any of his friends print.

In 1918 Mr. Smith wrote a syndicated series of articles, called "The Real Colonel House," which George Creel sought to suppress as harmful to the national interest. Col. House had read and corrected the proofs of that book, as, before he died, he read and revised some pages of this. So this is the colonel's story, perhaps more frankly told than in the published "Intimate Papers."

THE CURIOUS FACT is that, despite the extravagance with which Mr. Smith tells his story, so much of it is true. There is no parallel in American history to the House-Wilson intimacy. Van Buren was Jackson's lieutenant; Hanna was McKinley's boss; Louis Howe was Franklin Roosevelt's apostle. House was more. There were times when diplomacy detoured the State Department through House's home; Wilson did trust him as, probably, no other President trusted any man. And, in the end, apparently, in his sickness and disillusion, Wilson hated the man he had given world fame.

Why? That is the mystery which many men have attempted to fathom. Mr. Smith suggests that people close to Mr. Wilson and jealous of House's influence upon him deliberately set out to poison the President's mind against him, and he names Mrs. Wilson and Admiral Grayson as among those responsible. At times he hints that George Creel, against whom he has a personal grudge, was another. Ray Stannard Baker's story was that Wilson felt House usurped authority at the Peace Conference. Mr. Smith, who reflects Col. House's own meditations in the later years, believes that the beginning of the break lay back of that.

The two men, as Mr. Smith sees them, were complementary. Wilson he pictures as an unoriginal mind, with no genuine philosophy and no sense of practical politics. House had both, and was, at least at first, content to be a mysterious shadow behind the throne. (When he came to New York in Wilson's first campaign, his first act was to have his name removed from his office door that he might be the more inconspicuous.) But House was unknown nationally until Wilson adopted him, and he faded when Mr. Wilson broke with him. Mr. Smith believes that the break was also the cause of Wilson's fading.

Every detail added to the story has its interest. But most readers are likely to feel that Mr. Smith would have made a more impressive case for his hero had he written less obviously as a hero worshiper.

Miss Francesca McKenney Wed To Mr. Magill at Handley Hall

Estate of Bride's Uncle Is Scene Of Quiet Ceremony; Couple to Live In New York After West Indies Cruise

AT A QUIET ceremony at beautiful Handley Hall, near Kensington, Md., Miss Francesca McKenney was married yesterday afternoon to Bradford Steele Magill, of New York. Handley Hall is the estate of her uncle, Frederic D. McKenney, who gave her in marriage.

Only members of the two families and very close friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Edward Buckey. The couple exchanged their vows before an improvised altar in front of the living room fireplace, which was banked with smilax and ferns. At either side of the pre-Dieu was a tall standard of white autumn flowers, which were also placed in the dining room.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Albert McKenney, of Washington, and the late Mr. McKenney, wore a gown of white satin made with a tight fitting bodice and full skirt. Her heirloom veil of Brussels lace fell to the end of her train and was attached to a coronet of orange blossoms on her Titian hair. She wore as her only ornament a diamond sunburst, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a cluster of hybrid and butterfly orchids with lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was her cousin, Mrs. William Rapley, the former Frederica McKenney. Mrs. Rapley had chosen a floor length gown of smoke gray crepe outlined with bands of coral at the neck. She carried an arm bouquet of coral colored gladioli and deep blue delphinium.

Thomas G. Early Is Best Man

Thomas G. Early, of Washington, was best man for Mr. Magill, and the ushers were James E. Reid, Charles A. McKenney, jr., brother of the bride, and Gale McLean, all of Washington, Sidney Morgan Henry, jr., of New York, and Thomas Mellon Evans, of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. McKenney was gowned in pale gray chiffon with which she wore a tiny gray flowered hat and a corsage of purple orchids. Mrs. Louis J. Magill, mother of the bridegroom, wore a green ensemble and a corsage of Belmont gardenias.

After the ceremony the guests lingered on to toast the couple's health in champagne and share the wedding cake. When she left on her wedding trip, the bride wore a dark brown ensemble of silk crepe with a big brown off-the-face hat and a corsage of white orchids tipped in purple.

Mr. and Mrs. Magill will sail today from New York on the new liner America for a West Indies cruise. On their return they will make their home in New York, where the bridegroom is an attorney.

Frank Holcomb, son of Gen. and Mrs. Holcomb, is cruising on the Chesapeake Bay in his own boat, the Moondance. He will return to Washington in time to reenter the Georgetown School of Foreign Service the latter part of this month.

Mrs. Holcomb, who became a "Californiac" almost overnight during the general's recent inspection tour of the West Coast, on which she accompanied him, plans to go back there soon. She hopes to get away soon after Christmas for a two or three months' stay at Palm Springs.

Since Gen. Holcomb's tour as commandant of the Marine Corps is due to end the last of the year, the Holcombs have no idea where they will be this time next year. One thing seems certain, with the international situation as it is: The general undoubtedly will be retained on active duty.

Furs Demand Extra Caution In Make-Up

Wrong Shade Can Ruin Effect of Most Costly Adornments

By Carolyn Abbott.

SKUNK POMPONS in your suit lapel. Beaver handles on your umbrella. Leopard earrings dangling from your ears. A dab of silver fox on your gloves. These are only a few ways the stylists have manipulated furs to give elegance to your fall and winter wardrobe. All in all, it's going to be a fur season. It goes from the brim of your hat to the hem of your coat. This emphasis on fur fashions calls for careful selection and application of cosmetics colors.

Furs can flatter your face tremendously, or drain it of verve and individuality. Much depends upon your make-up, whether you look overly dressed or elegantly lady-like. In general (with a few exceptions) dramatic furs, such as paradise fox, silver fox, guanco, leopard, civet cat, red fox, black and white striped skunk call for vivid shades of make-up. Also, all black furs need bright cosmetic colors. Such furs as ermine, beaver, sable, white carcoul, white broadtail and white rabbit need muted reds or soft pastel shades of cosmetics.

"Cinnabar" for Red Fox

Specifically speaking, red fox calls for minimum amount of make-up, otherwise your face will look cheap and artificial. Some of the new shades of rouge, lipstick and nail polishes with undertones of rust or brown are appropriate facial colors for this type of fur. "Cinnabar," a deep red with a faintly brown cast, is ideal with red fox. "Firelight," a rich, deep subtle red is still another shade that goes well with this fur.

Gray Persian lamb and gray squirrel need make-up with depth. The new winey tones, with just a hint of purple, look well on a face surrounded by gray fur. "Burgundy," a deep, warm red which palpitates with feeling and meaning, is an excellent make-up color for gray. This new tone suggests the soft petals of a dark rose or the color one sees glowing in old glass decanters. "Wine Glow," a soft, deep red with a suggestion of purple, is another new make-up shade to be worn with the gray furs.

Mink, brown beaver, brown Persian lamb, mouton, nutria and other brown furs need soft, medium shades of make-up with hints of brown. Since these are soft furs, a harsh, bright, strident make-up would strike a discordant note. With any of these furs, be sure to choose some color like "Indian Sage," with rich burnished tones that spice brown.

Discreet Tones Needed

Ermine, white caracul and white broadtail are dramatic furs that they call for discreet make-up tones. For example, if you are a brunette and wear any of the white furs, you can go the limit with bright shades of rouge, lipstick and nail polishes. Such clear reds as "School House Red" have a vivid, flaming tone. But if you are a blonde in ermine, you'd better stick to pastel shades. "Rose Fumee," a misty, coral pink goes well with blonde hair, fair skin and white fur. This is a natural looking make-up that gives a healthful glow to the cheeks and lips.

Civet cat, leopard (one of the most popular furs of the season), silver fox are the dramatic furs. They call for clear, vivid make-up shades. The pastel tones of cosmetics would leave you drab looking with these types of furs. You can be as daring as your own skin tones will allow in choosing lipstick and rouge to be worn with leopard. Your only restraint there is good taste.

College Rooms To Be Simple This Season

The trend's away from messy conglomeration in the dormitory. Instead there's a comfortable combination of Early American maple and modern bleached woods, rag rugs and candlewick bedspreads.

Two popular ideas for campus rooms are the doodle cloth and the bulletin board, featured ready-made by some stores. The doodle cloth could be made in a jiffy out of unbleached domestic. It hoards the cute drawings and witticism of new friends and old. The bulletin board can be made out of dark colored burlap, cut and fitted to the space you want it to fill. It's sort of an easy-to-read diary, holding notes to yourself or your roommate, clippings, programs and a photograph or two if you like.

When you're selecting curtains, tablecloths and bedspreads, remember you can stay within your budget and have washable colorfast fabrics, too.

Vivid Make-up With Dramatic Furs

When you step out in your Platina jacket, similar to the one above, which was designed by Dien Boche, of the Waldorf, you're wearing the world's most luxurious fur. This elegant fur with its overtones of silverish gray, needs a dramatic make-up. The rouge, lipstick and nail polish should be a cool, vivid shade of red. One of the new subtle reds with a hint of purple harmonizes with this type of fur

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Wife Sever Social Relations With 'Friend' Who Tolerates Her Husband's Amorous Advances?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I belong to a social group of "young marrieds." We get together about once a month for an evening of bridge, and usually there are four tables of players. In this group is a young wife who pretends to be a very good friend of mine, but on several occasions I have seen my husband make love to her and she accepted his advances without protest.

My question is this: When it comes her turn to entertain, should my husband and I accept an invitation to her home? My feeling is that I don't want to go. Then, too, when it comes our turn to entertain, should I invite her and her husband? I know if I don't ask them, it will mean a quarrel with my husband.

This woman once told me that she—or, rather "they"—don't like to play bridge, but that they want to "keep in" with this group. Yet, another time, she made the statement she didn't especially care for the group, because we don't serve highballs or other alcoholic beverages. Please advise me what attitude to take toward her.

WORRIED WIFE.

Dr. Popenoe Recommends Keeping Poker Face

DEAR W. W.: It seems beside the point to make an issue of this woman's tolerant attitude toward your husband's "advances." If she had indignantly spurned his overtures, your essential problem would still be the same. And that problem has to do with your husband's conduct—not hers. Either he is a philanderer at heart—in which case, if he were not making a play for this woman, it would be someone else. Or you have allowed yourself to become so unattractive to him, in appearance, behavior, etc., that he is instinctively looking elsewhere for romantic stimulus and response.

You can't banish the lurking danger, which rises from within the marriage, by brashly advertising your jealous resentment of your husband's flirtatious interest in the light minded lady. As you clearly foresee, you would be aggravating the conjugal conflict which already exists, if you were to let fear or a sense of outrage dominate your actions in this critical period.

It is all-important to keep an appearance of surface harmony, wifely trust and social aplomb, while negotiating your marriage safely through the present shallows and, at the same time, overhauling and setting to right whatever is amiss between your husband and yourself. It would be dangerously undiplomatic to make the lady the conspicuous butt of "the cut direct," at this time, by rejecting her perfunctory offer of hospitality or by refusing to invite her to your next-in-line card party.

In the October issue of YOUR LIFE Magazine, Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations, outlines a 10-point program for wives to follow, when coping with the threat of infidelity. You can get this magazine on almost any news stand, and I suggest you buy it for this article alone.

Among other things, Dr. Popenoe advocates: Never giving your husband the slightest hint you are uneasy; minding your own business (which means leaving "the other woman" out of the picture); improving yourself, instead of trying to improve him; making him feel happy (not guilty!) when he is with you; identifying yourself with his comfort, well being and self esteem; building up more interests in common, etc.

Dr. Popenoe's nationally recognized success in healing incipient and often malignant marital discord gives weight to any recommendations he has to offer in treating jealousy and disloyalty. The measure of your present need of his philosophical counsel is supplied by your hysterical latter-day inclination to put your husband on the red-handed defensive. What you must do is bring common sense and self control to bear in mending the rift within the marriage, which undoubtedly is as much your making as his. M. H.

Rigorous Diet May Cause Crepey Throat

Bitter Complaints Usually Follow Slimming Session

By Ida Jean Kain

WE had rather face it now than later! Rigorous dieting may cause what's whispered about as crepy throat! Invariably, at the end of a slimming session, there are a few bitter complaints about this feminine Achilles' heel. This time we don't want any such complaints.

If you take a few precautions you can emerge with a lovelier and younger-looking throat. Here are the beauty aids. . . . Every time you cream your face, be sure to cream and massage your throat. The habit of doing this night and morning will go a long way toward improving the line. The cream lubricates and wards off wrinkles and the gentle massage stimulates the circulation so that the tissues are better nourished. Finish by dashing cold water over the throat to tone the skin.

Exercise Needed

If you sleep on a high, hard pillow, you should do something about that, too! Take out part of the feathers so that it doesn't prop your head up. Or, learn to sleep without any pillow.

And, whether your chin is single or double, smooth or wrinkled, and whether or not you are dieting, you need chin exercises! The average woman doesn't get nearly enough exercise for the muscles of the throat. That's why there are so few truly beautiful thoratlines. It's too bad, because a surprisingly small amount of exercise will do wonders, and there is no part of the figure which deteriorates so rapidly when neglected.

The secret of your throat exercise is to slowly tense the muscles as the movements are performed and to slowly relax them afterward. Merely turning the head swiftly from side to side will do little else than make you dizzy.

Tip the head back, open the mouth wide, then slowly close it while resisting strongly with the muscles of the lower jaw. Repeat three times.

Blow Up Balloon

Again tip the head back and slowly circle as if you were watching an airplane. Tense all the muscles of the throat as you circle the head away over to one side, then to the other. Perform three times.

Another stunt is to blow up a fairly good sized balloon. Tip the head back, then huff and puff. This is good facial as well as chin exercise.

The most strenuous chin exercise and one of the best is to lie on the back on the bed with the head over the side and lowered, then to very slowly raise the head to chin level. Slowly lower and repeat three times, later six.

Little Daughter Should Be Trained In Clothes Sense

By Associated Press Feature Service

It takes years to develop good taste in clothes. If your little daughter is to be a well-dressed young woman five or ten years hence, you need to start training her clothes sense now.

It's a bother to take a child with you when you go shopping, but it's a good idea just the same.

How else can she learn about color and line? Let her choose her own clothes as far as possible. Or, if you make them yourself, let her choose the material.

Children's departments this fall are filled with styles which are exciting but still in good taste. For school there are wool plaid outfits, made just like grown-up suits, corduroy jumper dresses with contrasting blouses, shirt-waist-style garbardines with prim white colors, and sweaters and skirts in every possible color combination.

Your child probably loves bright colors best—red and orange and bright blue. But try to interest her in some of the less obvious color schemes, too—beige with brown, deep wine with aqua dark green with yellow. She'll learn to love them.

If she's underweight, you'll probably have difficulty in the hat department. She'll want the fussiest, most be-feathered creation on display. You can persuade her to simplicity.

If she's over 12, let her indulge her love of finery with some gaudy bit of costume jewelry designed especially for children.

The mama who sews can make her young daughter happy by letting her help plan a costume. The child can pick buttons and collar and cuff sets for the new frock. She can help sew them on, too.

Mother and daughter might go together to the local sewing center and make the dress under the supervision of experts.

To Give or Not to Give

WELL, MARY, I grant you that receiving wedding invitations from mere acquaintances are headaches. It does sort of put you on the spot. But you aren't the only one swamped with these so-called "duns." Nearly every one has the same experience, sooner or later. However, you do seem to get more than your share. But stop fuming. And don't try to stretch your pocketbook to buy presents for persons whom you hardly know. Of course, if you want to cultivate their friendship, you might send inexpensive gifts. But even that isn't at all necessary.

You didn't say, but I assume your invitation to the ceremony also included an invitation to the reception or breakfast. In that case it means that the senders consider you an intimate friend and you should reciprocate with a gift—even if you don't know them too well. If, however, no card was included for the reception or breakfast (if there is one) you are under no obligations to acknowledge the wedding invitation with a gift.

Should you receive an invitation to the church alone or an announcement of the marriage afterward, it means that you are merely an acquaintance—unless the wedding is so small that only friends and relatives are asked to the church and there is no breakfast or reception after the ceremony. In the latter case, you should send a gift.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

Jean Aller, Central High Graduate, Writes Fascinating Book for Children

WASHINGTON'S very young readers will enjoy a book which has just been published by one of Washington's young authors-artists. She is Jean Aller, Central High School graduate who lives with her mother at the Argonne Apartments. Her book, designed for children from 3 to 7, is entitled "Mac" and tells an engaging tale of a Scottie searching for his lost kitten-playmate. She not only wrote the text but lettered it all by hand. Her drawings illustrate the text in such a way that pre-school youngsters who have listened to the story once or twice can retell it themselves by looking at the pictures.

Jean Aller

Jean first made history 19 years ago, when she became the first white child born on St. Paul Island, in the Bering Sea 200 miles off the Alaskan Coast. Her father, the late Henry Day Aller, was Federal agent for the Bureau of Fisheries there. She attributes her interest in books to the stories he used to read to her.

Mac, incidentally, is her own Scottie, and the other animal characters in the book also were drawn from life. She received her art training at the Abbott School and the Washington Animated Cartoon School. She will return this year to the King-Smith Studio School, where she studies creative writing under Lesley Frost, daughter of the poet, Robert Frost.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES—On the rear tire of a college student's jalopy: "Flat for Rent" . . . Blagden avenue, between elegant Sixteenth street and scenic Rock Creek Park: "Pair of mules for sale, cheap."

Many a Congressman woos lady constituents with "Aunt Sammy's Recipes," a 142-page cookbook written by Ruth Van Deman and Fanny Walker Yeatman, of the Bureau of Home Economics. The book has been removed from the Department of Agriculture's free list and now sells for 15 cents at the Government Printing Office. But it is still included among the bulletins which members of Congress may receive free of charge, and some 400,000 copies have been turned over to them since March. Agriculture officials say they could dispose of more than 1,000,000 annually in this way, but that would leave them without funds for the other bulletins on conservation and onion culture needed by the cooks' husbands.

Singing Voice May Be Helped By Home Study

PEOPLE who sing have such a grand, good time! They're in demand at their friends' parties, they're busy members of choral groups. Listening to them from your own too-often obscure corner, you sigh, "If only I had a voice!"

Of course, you already have! It may not seem of operatic caliber—but it's a voice and you can train it yourself to be much, much better than it is now.

Practising with right instruction, you can add to the richness or resonance of your tones, you can even increase your range.

To get your head resonators to working stand facing the wall or in a corner of your room and throw your voice—YOO-HOO, YOO-HOO—much in the manner of a cuckoo clock. Soon you will feel a vibration in the head just above the nose.

Humming exercises will develop resonance and also will add to the range of your head or high tones.

Standing erect in an easy, natural pose, place hands behind ears and turn palms in toward cheeks—as in our diagram. Breathe deeply through the nose, protrude lips as if whistling and exhale, singing softly "oo" as in "boots."

Repeat, with lips still protruding, until you feel a sensation of resonance and then softly hum any melody, slowly closing the lips and keeping the "mm" vibrating in the head.

How proud you feel when people ask you to "please, sing!" Our new 24-page instruction book, WAKE UP AND SING, gives illustrated directions, simple exercises to develop correct breathing, resonance and range. Explains the elements of music.

Send 15c in coins for our instruction book, WAKE UP AND SING, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

Club Season Here Heralds Wide Travel for Mrs. Dunbar

THE BEGINNING of the club season means more than arranging programs for Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs—it means traveling hundreds of miles to take part in them.

Thursday of this week she went to Clarksburg, W. Va., to address a meeting of the State Tuberculosis Association and to be guest of honor at a reception given for her by the women's clubs of Clarksburg and the surrounding towns.

Monday she will be in New York City for a meeting of the National Citizens' committee of the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy and will remain to attend an executive meeting on Wednesday of the committee on the Cause and Cure of War, and a session Thursday of the National Consumer-Retailer Council.

She will return to headquarters here on Saturday for the regular consumer broadcast of the General Federation.

Her October schedule begins with an address October 7 at the New Century Club in Detroit, followed by participation in the meeting of the American Public Health Association there October 8 to 10.

October 15 she will address the Woman's Club of Jackson, Mich., the following day, the Woman's Club of Wilmette, Ill., and the next day the Illinois State Graduate Nurse Association.

She will go from there to Norfolk, Nebr., for the meeting of the Nebraska State Federation of Women's Clubs on October 18 and will return here for a brief two days in her office.

ALTHOUGH she has much of her mail forwarded to her while she is travelling, Mrs. Runbar always finds quantities more waiting for her here every time she returns. The countless talks she is obliged to make before club and civic groups are but one phrase of the heavy duties of the General Federation president. Mrs. Dunbar, whose home is in Portland, Oreg., is now on the last stretch of her 3-year administration, a period in which she has only been back to Oregon twice to see her daughter and the young grandson whose merry little pictures smile from all sides of her room at federation headquarters.

On October 23 she goes to Hartford for the annual meeting of the Connecticut Tuberculosis Association and to New York for sessions of the Herald-Tribune conference and the annual dinner of the National Consumer-Retailer Conference.

October 28 she is scheduled to speak before the Woman's Club of Collingswood, N. J., the next day before the Lehigh Valley Congress of Women's Clubs, in Pennsylvania; October 31 in Lansing, Mich., and Nov. 1 before the Berks County Federation in Reading, Pa.

Other engagements carry her almost up to the time of the mid-winter board meeting in January.

HONOR DR. BOWERMAN—Members of the staffs of the three Public Libraries have arranged a dinner tonight at Norbandy Farm, honoring Dr. George F. Bowerman, who is retiring as librarian on September 30. A feature of the occasion will be the singing of French songs, with Mrs. Margaret T. Whight at the piano. There will be no speeches—just fun.

RUSH TEA—The Mother's Club of Theta Delta Chi will give a tea tomorrow from 4 to 7 at the fraternity house, 1854 Kalorama road, opening the rush season.

Mrs. H. Elizabeth O'Connor, president of the mothers' group, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. T. Kenzie Carpenter, Mrs. Edwin Hege, Mrs. Lee R. Pennington and Mrs. Thomas Walton.

POLISH CLUB MEETS — The Polish Club of Washington and Group 848 of the Polish National Alliance will have their first social gathering of the season tonight at Stansbury Auditorium 5832 Georgia avenue, northwest. Joseph Chmielewski and Anthony Mozynski are in charge of arrangements.

SEASON STARTS SOON — The Women's Club of Sixteenth street Highlands, which is more than 18 years old, will resume its fall and winter meetings on October 2. Meetings will be on the first and third Wednesday of each month.

The first session will be held at the home of Mrs. Minott E. Porter, of 1428 Madison street, northwest.

Senate Filibuster Threatened On U. S. Agency Review Bill

By Edward Ryan

Threat of a filibuster to force action on the Logan-Walter bill at this session of Congress was raised in the Senate late yesterday during discussion of a motion to consider the Ramspeck civil service extension bill.

Several members tangled briefly over which bill should be brought up first, and Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, said he would oppose action on any other legislation until he received assurance from Majority Leader Barkley that the Logan-Walter bill, to make decisions of the Government agencies subject to court review, would be considered at this session.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, joined in calling for action on the Walter-Logan measure, and said it was entitled to consideration before the Ramspeck bill.

Burke declared that the bill had passed the House by a 3-to-1 majority, while a similar bill passed the Senate by unanimous consent 16 months ago, only to be sent back for reconsideration because Senator Barkley was absent at the time.

It was understood that Democratic leaders were preparing to seek delay on the bill until the next session, in January, to permit reviewing its proposals in the light of the still-unfinished Attorney General's report on administrative procedure in government agencies. The latter is expected to be completed next month, after the date now set for adjournment.

Although action on Mead's motion to bring up the Ramspeck bill was suspended after an hour of discussion, Barkley said there would be debate on the measure Monday.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, shortly before the Senate recessed, indicated that he would support the Ramspeck bill, and said that he "wanted to discuss some of the reasons this bill should be passed, and why both political parties should keep some of the promises they have been making for the past 50 years so that a real system of merit may be set upon government."

Mead said the bill would simply restore the authority which Congress gave to President Harrison to bring all agencies into the civil service. He said this power had later been taken away in acts setting up new agencies. Where Congress has exempted jobs in some agencies from civil service, the Attorney General has ruled that the President is powerless to cover them into the classified service, Mead explained.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, charged that in its present form the bill would permit putting all Government positions, from Cabinet officers down, under civil service. Mead said the intention was to bring in only rank and file employes, and added that the bill could be amended to exclude job holders appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, said yesterday that he had asked the Attorney General to rule on the commission's interpretation of the Hatch Act which would require that any Federal civil service employe who violates the law or the civil service political activity rules be automatically removed from the service.

Mitchell, speaking to a postmasters' convention in New York City, said he doubted whether Congress, in approving the two Hatch Acts, intended to take away the commission's discretion in fixing penalties. He said the commission's attorneys had tried hard to find room for discretion rather than mandatory removal for violations, then handed the problem to the Justice Department.

Wynn Epler, acting president of the WPA local of the United Federal Workers, has sent in an account of the recent resignation of four members of the WPA local reported in Wednesday's Federal Diary.

Epler pointed out that the resignation letter charged that a small official group had adopted an anti-conscription resolution without consulting the membership.

"The facts are these," Epler's letter said. "The executive committee (of the union) empowered to conduct urgent business between regular business meetings of the local, indorsed the resolution drawn up and approved by the Washington Industrial Union Council of the C. I. O. and submitted to all locals for similar action. This action of the executive committee was reported in the next issue of the union Newsletter, which, as usual, carried an announcement of time and place of the regular monthly union business meeting. The WPA union's weekly Newsletter is distributed to all WPA employes.

"At the business meeting on September 5, 1940, all action taken by the executive committee since the previous meeting was reported for approval or disapproval. The anti-conscription resolution was read and approved by unanimous vote of all members present. Copies of the resolution were then sent to the press, but received no notice.

Council Urges D. C. To Widen Avenue

Width of 60 Feet Is Recommended For Massachusetts

The District Traffic Advisory Council last night recommended the widening of Massachusetts avenue from Wisconsin avenue to Sheridan Circle northwest from its present 40 feet to 60 feet at the opening meeting of the organization held in the District Building.

The previously recommended widening of 4 feet on the avenue was termed a "waste of the taxpayers' money" since it would not adequately take care of traffic, members stated. It was recommended that rows of trees now lining the curb be removed, and the sidewalks replaced inside the lines of trees within the present sidewalks "at the earliest possible time."

A half-hour's heated discussion on the use of arrows on loading platforms brought a recommendation that arrows on platforms along Fourteenth street between Florida avenue and Park road northwest be replaced by some other emblem. The action was adopted on a resolution introduced by George E. Keneipp, vice chairman of the group, who left the chair to make the motion.

Stating that Constitution avenue "has reached a saturation point in handling traffic," Director of Traffic William A. Van Duzer urged that the group adopt a resolution "favoring the opening of Independence avenue southwest from Fourteenth street to the Lincoln Memorial and the Arlington Memorial Bridge at the earliest possible date." The proposal was unanimously accepted as were 12 other recommendations of changes in ordinances on specific traffic areas.

The recommendations were:

No stopping, standing or parking at any time on the north side of Calvert street northwest, and at the east end of the Calvert street bridge.

Parking prohibited from 8 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 to 6 p. m. on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue northwest from Fifteenth street west to the alley.

No parking from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. on the east side of Fourteenth street from Constitution avenue to the underground garage entrance of the Labor Department.

No parking from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. on the east side of Fifteenth street between H and I streets northwest.

No parking on the west side of Twentieth street from Massachusetts avenue to Connecticut avenue northwest at any time.

Parking prohibited on Thirty-seventh street from Calvert street to 2447 Thirty-seventh from 7 to 9:30 a. m. except for loading and unloading, and parking limited in the section to 30 minutes from 9:30 a. m. to 10 p. m.

On hour parking in the area bounded by Twentieth, Twenty-second, H and K streets northwest.

No parking at any time on Second street northeast from L street north for a distance of 108 feet.

Youth Orchestra Responds to Stokowski's Downbeat

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the All-American Youth Orchestra in Constitution Hall Friday night. Program: Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Arioso from Clavichord Concerto in F minor, Prelude from Partita in E major, Chorale-Prelude (Mein Jesu, was fuer Seelenweh befaellst Du in Gethsemane"), Passacaglia in C minor (Bach), Symphony No. 5 (Shostakovich).

Welcoming the band of young musicians whom Leopold Stokowski has led on a notable tour of South America, an enthusiastic audience greeted the All-American Youth Orchestra last evening in Constitution Hall with ovations of applause and cheers. The demonstrations were obviously motivated not only by the desire to congratulate the travellers on their accomplishments in foreign lands but also by admiration for the remarkable quality of their performance. Their playing had an integrated spirit and a technical skill which fully warranted the cordial tribute both to their musicianship and to the leadership which has brought them to proficiency.

BROWN

Although Washingtonians have not forgotten the disappointment caused by the cancellation of the concert which was to have been given here at the Potomac Watergate before the orchestra departed on its voyage below the equator, it is probable that their pleasure was the greater for the postponement.

Certainly the playing was heard to better advantage last evening than it would have been in the open air, with the inevitable distortions of amplification, and there can be no doubt that the orchestra has gained by experience a homogeneity which it would not have had at that time.

Assembled from all parts of the United States for an experiment which has proved a complete success, the All-American Youth Orchestra is an organization in which the Nation can take pride. It is a most satisfactory demonstration of the fact that our country abounds in musical talent awaiting just such a call as Leopold Stokowski uttered when he summoned the orchestra into existence. His faith in the latent artistry of our land has been justified, as has been the popular conviction that the day of our musical independence has arrived.

Stokowski's virtuosity as a conductor has been reflected in the style of the orchestra, which has acquired in a short time the devices of phrasing and coloring which characterize his methods. The adaptability of the young musicians to his idiosyncracies was immediately evident in the reading of Bach's D minor Toccata and Fugue with which the program began. The treatment was unmistakably accented in the Stokowski manner with a dynamic suppleness and a sensitiveness of coloration.

After this display of tonal architecture on the part of the whole orchestra, Stokowski demonstrated the ability of sectional parts in the Arioso from the F minor Clavichord Concerto, the Prelude from the E major Partita and the beautiful Chorale-Prelude. "Mein Jesu, was fuer Seelenweh befaellst Du in Gethsamane." The Bach section of the program ended with a powerful exposition of the C minor Passacaglia, again disclosing the full resources of the ensemble.

Whatever may be the incongruity between Bach and Shostakovich as concert companions, I have never heard a better performance of the Russian composer's fifth symphony. It was read with a clarity that respected every phrase and an eloquence which brought out every emotional shading. The performance made the music sound sincere, whereas Shostakovich is frequently made to appear a poseur more clever in his instrumentation than honest in his intentions.

When thrice recalled to the podium at the close of the symphony, Stokowski thanked the auditors for the heartiness of their reception and their appreciative response to the music. He expressed as well his deep obligation to those who had done all in their power to make the Southern tour overcome almost insuperable difficulties: President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and Audrey Williams, director of the National Youth Administration. To reward the audience with expected extra numbers, he then conducted two transcriptions which were made and rehearsed on shipboard: Novacek's "Perpetuum Mobile" and Debussy's "La Soiree dans Granade."

One must record one's regret that Stokowski did not choose to present an all-American program in the National Capital. It would have been eminently fitting that the only appearance of the orchestra here should have been thus signalized. An opportunity was overlooked to make a memorable occasion thoroughly native in atmosphere and in artistic significance.

Boy, 2, Badly Hurt In Auto Accident

Two-year-old William M. Hills, colored, of 1700 Florida avenue northwest, was in Children's Hospital last night with possible brain concussion after he was struck in front of his home by an automobile police said was operated by John J. Anderson, 33, of 3310 Seventeenth street northeast.

After the automobile she was driving collided with another on the Pennsylvania avenue bridge southeast, Cora Mayburry, 61, of Meadows, Md., was treated at Providence Hospital for possible fracture of the neck. The car colliding with hers was operated by Hugh Foster, 24, of 1436 Eighteenth place southeast, police reported.

Ike Charnet, 43, of 436 Sixth street northeast, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for fracture of the ribs and severe head injuries after a car he was driving collided with a truck operated by Robert Ryan, 23, of 823 Fifth street northwest, according to the police.

Clinton Humphries, 67, of 1448 Girard street northwest, suffered head and leg injuries when he was struck in the 600 block of F street northwest by an automobile said to be operated by Woodford R. Hall, of 1712 D street northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Sterling Warwick, 16, colored, of Selecia, Md., was treated at Providence Hospital for possible fracture of the pelvis after being struck by a car in Chapel Hill, Md.

Mrs. Vickers Dies At Her Home Here

Mrs. Isabelle Herrick Vickers, who was prominent in Red Cross rehabilitation work during the World War and a founder of the New York Music Settlement House, died yesterday after a brief illness at her home 2230 California street northwest.

The widow of H. Montague Vickers, she came to Washington from New York in 1934. Since then, she had continued her interest in social nad philanthropic activities.

Mrs. Vickers leaves a niece, Mrs. Florence A. Hamilton, of Darien, Conn., and a cousin, Mrs. William H. Higgins, of Richmond. Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. at Gawler's funeral home. Interment will be at Woodlawn Cemetery, New York City.

Capacity Audience Greets Stokowski's Youth Orchestra on Its Return to Capital

Out front a capacity crowd of 3,800, including diplomats from 20 Latin-American countries and ranking State Department officials packed Constitution Hall. They awaited the downbeat calling the first burst of music from Leopold Stokowski's All-American Youth Orchestra.

The concert marked the archestra's triumphal return from a tour that won wild acclaim from audiences throughout South America that were prepared to be critical of the youthful musicians.

Backstage dinned to the shrills of a score of violins and the blue notes of as many wind instruments as the 100 players tuned up for their Capital performance.

They were anxious to win the same applause from the music-lovers of the Capital they had from a crowd of 20,000 in a concert not long ago in Buenos Aires—the high point in the musical careers of many of the musicians.

"It was like a chunk out of my life—a monderful chunk," murmured Miss Kay Rickert, of 3311 N street northwest, about the muted notes of her violin.

She told of a sea voyage in which brief ship's bulletins of an overseas war were the only interruptions to the musical concentration of the musicians.

Then, like a crescendo in one of their own symphonies, growing acclaim of audiences in Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires—everywhere, in fact—greeted their efforts, she said.

Delight in the beauties of the South American capitals mingled with pleased amusement at the reactions of the Latin audiences.

Premature applause brought prodigious calls for quiet that drowned out the original interruption in several cities the violinist reported. At another capital a huge neon sign commanding "Silencio!" blinked on and off over the stage so the gringo musicians might play without interruptions.

KAY RICKERT TUNES UP

Miss Rickert denied having seen any evidences of Stokowski's famous temperament during the tour and declared him "very easy to work for."

But last night the white-haired conductor was closely guarded in a room backstage. "He never grants interviews just before a concert—it upsets him," a secretary explained.

When all his musicians were assembled on the stage, and the blue ribbon audience was expectantly quiet, the aging leader appeared. His face expressionless, he strode to the center of the platform, turned quickly to the orchestra and swept his young proteges into the first chords of Bach.

Britain Will Survive, Says Dr. Freeman

'Moral Decay' That Defeated Allies Has Not Infected Her, Bishop Believes

England's strong moral character will prevent its destruction, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, predicted last night as he dedicated the new edifice of the Episcopal Chapel of the Redeemer, in Fairway Hills, on Conduit road.

Declaring that "armies and navies are only as strong as the moral character of their men," the prelate told a crowd of more than 400 worshipers that "moral decay" had contributed to the downfall of other European nations.

Later in his address the prelate warned that peace could not be bought in the world's market places, but only promoted by Christian people.

Bishop Freeman confirmed a class of 5 children during the exercises, for which music was provided by the choirs of Redeemer Chapel and Epiphany Episcopal Church under the direction of Adolph Torovsky, music director-organist of the latter church.

Among the guests were the Diocesan Missioner and Mrs. Clyde Brown and Canon Edward Slater Dunlap, diocesan executive secretary. Both the clerics have helped guide the destinies of Redeemer Chapel, of which the Rev. M. M. Perkins is vicar.

With Mrs. A. V. Blackman as reception chairman, the Ladies Guild of the chapel served as hostesses at a reception afterward. The vestrymen were ushers.

Commissioners Vote to Ban Musical Automobile Horns

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a ban on musical horns on autos, particularly where the horns play more than two tones or notes and produce a sound duration of more than two seconds.

"Obviously such horns are not used primarily as a warning of danger, but more as a misdirected fad," stated Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who recommended the ban on the horns to the Commissioners.

The new regulation becomes effective in 10 days.

Muffler Cut-Outs Banned

Carrying the anti-noise campaign a bit further, the Commissioners ordered a complete ban on the use of muffler cut-outs. They instructed the car inspection agency not to issue an inspection certificate to cars with cut-outs.

Meantime, further parking restrictions on seven streets and five additional streets for one-way traffic were ordered by the Commissioners.

Five one-way streets are: Flagler street, from U to Adams street, northwest, for south-bound traffic only; Thirty-third street, from M street to Wisconsin avenue northwest, for north-bound traffic only; Thirty-fourth street northwest from Wisconsin avenue to M street, for south-bound traffic only; Pierce street, from First street to North Capitol street northeast, for westbound traffic only; and Warren street, from B to C streets northeast, for south-bound traffic only.

Parking changes ordered are:

In the Northwest section, Lanier place, on the north side from 1623 to 1705 Lanier place, no parking at any time; Loughboro road, from Little Falls road to Conduit road, no parking on north side any time; Park road, from Eleventh street to New Hampshire avenue, no parking north side any time; South street, from Wisconsin avenue to Thirty-first street, no parking south side any time; Wisconsin avenue, from car barn to Jenifer street, no parking on south side any time.

300 Irish Veterans Pledge Support for Conscription Act

Three hundred fighting Irishmen last night agreed on one thing—that the conscription act was good for the country and they were for it.

Dressed in bright green uniforms, the delegates to the fifth annual Irish War Veterans convention cheered the resolution upholding the draft and agreed that it was a good thing "to train the boys for what is to come."

Later, in a patriotic ritual showing the part the Irish have played in building America, 36 war veterans were inducted into the organization, with President George L. Cassidy officiating.

Wreath-laying ceremonies at 2 p. m. today and a banquet tonight will close the four-day convention of Irish veterans from all parts of the country.

Sergt. Frank Witchy, United States Army, retired, will sound taps at the Arlington ceremony, as he did when the Unknown Soldier was brought to the bier in 1921 and as he did later at President Wilson's funeral services. He will wear the colorful army uniform used in the Mexican wars of 1846, donated by the Smithsonian Institute.

Principal speaker at tonight's banquet will be Robert Brennan, Irish minister.

Three Faiths Stress Need Of Religion

Vital to Democracy, Leaders Agree At Round Table Conference

Washington representatives of three faiths, who had met in a Jesuit retreat house near Annapolis for a day of discussion, last night joined in a statement that democracy can be safeguarded only by religion.

Participants in the conference, first of its kind ever held in the well-known retreat headquarters for Catholic laymen at Manresa-on-the Severn, were guests of the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., director of the institution. The meeting was called by the Washington Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Clergymen and laymen of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewis religions attended.

"Religion and democracy are inextricably interwoven," the leaders said in a statement embodying the main points in their discussion on the topic. "Democracy's survival and growth are not possible without religion."

The leaders also declared "religion comes to its highest fruition in a democratic society."

Religion was defined as "to know, to love, and to serve God." Such a religion "demands a life of personal holiness lived in the presence of God," and finds its necessary expression in the loving and serving of our fellow-men."

Democracy was defined "as the safeguarding of individual and social rights; as man's free participation in and contribution toward life's significant relationships."

Among those taking part in the discussions were:

The Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., professor of political science, Catholic University; Ernest S. Griffith, professor of political science, American University; Rabbi Solomon Metz, Adas Israel Synagogue; Paul Richman, B'nai B'rith; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president, Howard University; Rabbi Samuel Silver, Hillel Foundation, University of Maryland; Dr. Howard Thurman, dean of the chapel, Howard University; Joseph D. Kaufman, Washington merchant and civic leader; the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., director, Manresa Retreat House; Fr. Raymond J. H. Kennedy, S. J., assistant director, Manresa Retreat House; the Rev. Laurence P. McHattie, graduate student, Catholic University; A. W. Gottschall, southern area director, National Conference of Christians and Jews, and Donald T. Sheehan, director, Washington Round Table.

Physicians at Mercy Hospital said he died instantaneously. Hundreds of persons gathered, jamming traffic for blocks.

FBI officials said that Brown, who came here as a clerk last October, complained of not feeling well Wednesday and was told to take sick leave. He was a graduate of the University of Arkansas in 1939.

Thursday night he registered at a Baltimore hotel, giving Arkansas as his home.

Arlington Woman's Club Helps Start Jewish Congregation

An Arlington County Jewish congregation is being launched on its career through the aid of the Ashton Heights Woman's Club, which is permitting the new Ohev Scholom (creating of peace) Congregation to use its clubhouse at 413 North Irving street until permanent quarters are secured.

Led by the youthful Rabbi Laurence Goldman, the congregation—first such Jewish group in the county—held initial services in the clubhouse last Sunday. Approximately 300 Jewish families reside in the county.

Rabbi Goldman holds degrees from College of the City of New York and the Rabbinical Seminary of the Mesifta Talmudical Seminary, also in New York. A cantor from that city is being engaged to conduct the services.

The committee of the new congregation includes Herman Schwarzman, president; M. Honick, vice president; S. Friedman, treasurer and chairman of the ticket committee for the High Holy days; Frank Cahn, secretary; Herald Austin, publicity chairman; All Wasserman, building chairman, and Harold Wilkenfeld, membership chairman.

The Women's Auxiliary, which held its initial meeting last Thursday night, is being guided by Mrs. M. Eigen, Mrs. Joseph Sklar, Mrs. Winkelfeld, V. Malnick and Mrs. I. Cohen.

"RESCUE THE PERISHING"
FANNY J. CROSBY
Rescue the perishing, care for the dying
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave;
Weep o'er the erring ones, lift up the fallen;
Tell them of Jesus the Mighty to Save
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This little sermon in song was written by the blind poet Fanny J. Crosby. It is a message of hope for the lost and fallen, popular not only in church prayer meetings but in Salvation Army Camps and in missions, rallies and social settlements the world over

Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne Star in Keith's Comedy, 'Hired Wife'

Robert Benchley, Virginia Bruce Cast; Latest "Time" Film Also on New Bill

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"HIRED WIFE." Universal picturization of an original story by George Beck, adapted to the screen by Richard Connell and Gladys Lehman, costarring Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne, with Virginia Bruce, Robert Benchley, John Carroll, Hobart Cavanaugh, Richard Lane and William Davidson. Directed by William Seiter. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

For its latest attraction, RKO-Keith's turns to the season's most successful metier—one of those daft comedies of tangled romance. "Hired Wife" is the title, Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Virginia Bruce are its pivotal farceurs and the result is better than many, not so good as the best.

Also on Keith's screen is the latest "March of Time" release, "On Foreign Newsfronts," a sickening resume of the war so far, shrewdly making its point from the angle of American newspapermen and their battles with foreign censorship.

No end of help to "Hired Wife" is the title player, soignee Rosalind Russell. Making the most of her portion of witty lines and looking more and more like Rosalind Russell and less and less like Myrna Loy (why bring that up?) Miss Russell simply causes one to wonder why Brian Aherne could be so dissatisfied with his hired wife.

Also brightening things immensely is Robert Benchley, rolling about uncomfortably in bed and changing his mind in critical situations. Only trouble with critic Benchley as an actor is that he mumbles almost all his bon mots; of course, you're supposed to mumble some, Master B, but why waste all of them?

Even before Faith Baldwin made it part of the folklore of our times for all "office wives" to be hopelessly in love with their bosses, secretaries have been one angle of the dramatic triangle. Such is the case of "Hired Wife." Miss Russell is the brittle gal Friday, taking it on the chin when business is bad, slaving away at $100 a week and eating out her innards when with the arrival of spring comes love.

Successful in the gross fashion of our hurried day, Brian Aherne is a pleasantly amusing boss. But the first time he cast his handsome profile Miss Russell's way, she unfortunately rebuffed him. Since then when he's gotten amorous he falls for the flashy blondes; she has suffered in silence. When he picks up a model to promote his cement and suddenly needs a wife to act as a convenient business loophole, Virginia Bruce is the lady he chooses.

Happens then the savage tussel between two wise women for their man! By a trick, bright Miss Russell gets him, is foolish enough to spill the beans and forced to resort to involved machinations to bring a satisfactory fadeout to all her lovers in the audience.

That's the story in its familiar outline. Dressed in smart, tasteful fashion in regard to wordage, setting and costume, "Hired Wife" is at its best when Miss Russell is thinking up a new falsehood or Robert Benchley is acting as an incredulous lawyer. It lacks the pleasant abandon of "My Favorite Wife," "Too Many Husbands" and "I Love You Again," because it is not so neatly tied together. Its ending, reached simply because it cannot go on forever, lacks coordination and punch.

But since "Hired Wife" is not supposed to make sense anyway, it's best to enjoy what humor there is in it and not quibble too much. For this, as the "March of Time" would have you know, is an unhappy world.

"On Foreign Newsfronts" begins in the editorial rooms of the New York Times. It traces the variety of spots which contribute news to the free American press: London, Paris and finally Berlin. Then we follow the smashing of Poland after the pact with Stalin, the futile defenses of the Maginot, the ill-starred neutrality of Scandinavia, the despicable wantoness of the Low Countries' invasion. It's an unhappy, familiar story, retold in this form to warn of neutrality's futility.

So, with the latest Universal news and the documentary on one side and "Hired Wife" on the other, Keith's new bill again pits realism versus escape.

ROSALIND RUSSELL
After her success as one of the evil ladies in "The Women," Miss Russell has lately frolicked as less sinister comediennes, her latest appearance being in "Hired Wife," which opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's. Brian Aherne, Virginia Bruce, Robet Benchley and John Carroll are her associates

'Mystery Sea Raider' Mixes War's Facts With Fiction

"MYSTERY SEA RAIDER." Paramount picturization of a story by Robert Grant adapted to the screen by Edward E. Paramore, jr., with Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon, Onslow Stevens, Kathleen Howard, Wallace Rairden, Sven Hugo Borg, Henry Victor, Roland Verno, Louis Adlon, Will Kaufman, Monte Blue, Matthew Boulton, Gohr Van Vleck, Jean Del Val and Kay Linaker. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Columbia Theater.

"Mystery Sea Raider" might also have been called "Beware of Blondes." Or "Cherchez la Femme." Or "Stay Away from Women."

Because if a Gestapo agent had not fished an American night club canary out of the drink after a liner had been torpedoed, there wouldn't have been any picture. The whole thing leaves you with the conviction that rescuing blondes is very bad business. Except that said blonde (Carole Landis) finally torpedoes the Germans.

What might have happened to the S. S. Flint, but didn't, and part of what probably happened on the ill-fated Altmark and Athenia, are all wound up like a clock in "Mystery Sea Raider."

All the genius of the Gestapo and the German navy are shown encompassing the capture of a rusty old American freighter that hasn't been to sea for years. But this isn't the fumble-bum feat it seems at first glance. For the wornout ship is destined to be first disguised as a Danish freighter, then to cruise from nowhere to nowhere, sending out signals of distress to trusting oil tankers. When the tankers respond to the S O S they are promptly sunk—but with hoses extended to a float on the ocean surface, which is a sort of service station for submarines.

It may be that Navy men will hoot at the idea of using a sunken tanker as a sub refueling point. We wouldn't know about that. But it's an inspirational cinema thought, has evoked some of the finest photography of the year and makes "Mystery Sea Raider" more than just another sub picture.

Of special interest is the way news angles are woven into the story. The initial liner torpedoing recalls the S. S. Athenia. The use of the old American tramp as a prison ship and "sub mother" recalls the S. S. Altmark. The capture of an American ship recalls headlines about the S. S. Flint.

Action is one thing not lacking. There are battles, naval and fisticuffs, a smidgeon of lovemaking, with Henry Wilcoxon, playing the American captain, winning Carole Landis' affections over Onslow Stevens, the German captain, who is spurlos versenkt in a towering splash of water and explosive as the picture ends.

If all of "Mystery Sea Raider" had been as good as its photography, it would have been a picture of the year. The shots of subs gliding underwater, of a ship sinking to the ocean floor are positively chilling.

Everything happens to Guinn (Big Boy) Williams in a short, where he mingles with the jitterbugs, ickles and rug-cutters. Serves him right. There's a community singing short that inspires Columbia patrons to sound off lustily. The newsreel shows Wendell Willkie apparently getting a great reception in Chicago (but getting more booes than applause at the Columbia), also the great seas of flame sweeping the London waterfront and terrific destruction on what looks like Piccadilly while Winston Churchill surveys the scene with a grim John Bull smile. MARY HARRIS.

'The Howards of Virginia' Continues for Second Week

Following the example of the best-selling novel from which it was adapted, "The Howards of Virginia" is being continued for a second week at the Earle. The stage revue, headed by June Forrest and Bob Hall, also holdsover.

While many films of the present as well as the recent past have extolled America's history in the Civil War, the frontier days of the early West and even the French and Indian Wars further to the north, "The Howards of Virginia" brings to the screen the stirring days of the Revolutionary period. It is a story of some sweep, too long in its original to be completely captured by the cinema, but so forceful and vigorous an example of courage at a time strikingly similar to our own that when the Ten Best Fever hits the commentators later this year "The Howards of Virginia" is bound to be on many lists.

The story is of a young backwoodsman and the wife he captures from genteel Williamsburg. Her family is Tory through and through; his inclinations and experience make of him a Revolutionist. In her love for him the wife makes noble sacrifices of both her pride and physical comfort. In his love for her he builds a home symbolic of their mutual faith. Their first child, a son, takes after her Tory brother in that he is a cripple. Another son and a daughter bless their home. But whenever the combat arises between their beliefs in opposite causes, the wife and husband remain stanch in their respective ideals.

It is this fixed purpose which motivates the entire history, making it interesting as well as plausible. Through those eventful years the two hold together after seemingly impossible estrangement.

Adapted from Elizabeth Page's "The Tree of Liberty," the film is splendidly produced, with many scenes filmed in nearby Williamsburg. Virginians, by the way, are evidently enthusiastic with such a tribute to their colonial capital.

This reporter found nothing incongruous in Cary Grant's portrayal of the central character. To be sure it is not in the metier in which we are accustomed to see this whimsical comedian, but his about-face seems accomplished with knowing ability. Opposite him is that exceptional newcomer, Martha Scott, playing the proud wife with beauty and sincerity.

Other notable characterizations in the film includes those of Richard Carlson as a very human Thomas Jefferson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke as the reactionary brother and Phil Taylor as the surprisingly courageous son.

The stage bill offers songs by June Forrest, verses on the spot by Bob Hall and some pretty dancing by the invaluable Roxyettes. Sunny Rice and the Dolores Dancers complete the bill, with Eileen Ritter on her little black box as the Sing-a-Song-with-Mike girl. R. L. C.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 20.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER, whose work with the National Defense Council entails the preservation of good-will relations with the South American republics, will confer next week with representatives of the National Association of Performing Artists. The purpose will be to effectuate an idea proposed by John Steinbeck. Jimmy Walker, together with Maurice J. Speiser, counsel for the association, will offer the services of the foremost artists in America, whose various specialities will be recorded. These transcriptions—made by Heifetz, Pons, Whiteman, etc.—will be sent to every republic in South America. They will be broadcast there, every day, on radio time purchased by large American companies who have interests in these countries. Their popularity is expected, for the Nazi propagandists have no artists to compete.

LYONS

CLARK GABLE, who has harbored an urge to return to the speaking stage, is considering the leading role in Earnest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column" when that play reopens in Chicago. It's the role Franchot Tone played during the Broadway run . . . Sinclair Lewis will switch publishers. His forthcoming writings will be published by Random House . . . A famous producing firm, which exacts as high as 50 per cent commission from some of the stars it employs, will be cited before License Commissioner Moss for failing to get a booking license.

MRS. P. BRADLEY CLARK, of the Social Register, is incensed at the sight of any man wearing a straw hat after September 15, the day upon which the straw hat season traditionally ends. Ernest Brooks, photographer at the Cafe Pierre, prefers to wear a straw hat until the fall season really begins. Brooks wore that hat Tuesday evening, when the weather was warm and almost springlike . . . Mrs. Clark noticed that hat, and immediately went into action. It fell to the ground, and the socialite lady tried to stamp on it . . . Brooks still has his cherished straw hat, intact. Mrs. Clark has become a patient confined to her bed. For she missed the hat completely, when she stamped her foot—and broke her ankle.

"PORGY AND BESS," the Gershwin-Heyward opera which was presented by the Theater Guild five years ago, will be revived on Broadway this season. John Wildberg and Cheryl Crawford will produce it—at $2.20 top . . . If Civil Service Committee Paul Kern still challenges the power of the special investigation committee, Emil E. Ellis, the committee's counsel, will ask Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Church to cite Kern for contempt . . . Clare Boothe, who braved the perils of war-torn Europe to write the new best seller, "Europe in the Spring," will brave the Information Please program on October 1 . . . Frederic March wants to return to Broadway in a series of one-act plays written by Ferenc Molnar.

CLIFFORD ODETS, whose "Night Music" was criticized because it was too much like Saroyan—while Saroyan's "Time of Your Life" was criticized because it was too much like Odets—has been invited to resume his acting career, by playing the title role in the new Kaufman-Martin show, "The White Haired Boy." The play is based upon the career of William Saroyan . . . Sid Marion will succeed Willie & Eugene Howard, in "The Streets of Paris" . . . George Jessel will buy the American rights to "The Baker's Wife," the French prize-winning movie. He plans to produce it first as a play, and then sell the American screen rights . . . Albert Chapereau, who hoped to continue his business of importing foreign films, again has met misfortune. Fourteen of his movies are being held in Bordeaux.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 20.

"Strike Up the Band" will make the cash register in your box-office sound like "The Anvil Chorus." They've got so much in this picture that you wonder why they didn't become just a little parsimonious and save a snip for the next show. But then I think that about each Rooney and Garland picture. The kids are so clever—if they keep on topping themselves, where will they be by the time they reach voting age? With Mickey's abundant talent, it's just a shame that he'll be a perennial juvenile. Now I understand in his next picture he'll be teamed with 15-year-old Kathryn Grayson, who has a superb voice, and who's much smaller than Judy. There's no doubt about it, Judy's growing so fast that she should get a chance to play with either Gable or Bob Taylor.

HOPPER

And I hope they'll put at least one song in every picture she does. How that girl puts over a number! Now that she's grown up, I don't know why they won't allow Adrian to design her clothes. She's earned—for herself and her studio—the best, and I shall keep harping on it till she gets it.

It was grand to see Paul Whiteman again—swell personality. And how that guy loves music! Now that we're leaving democracy to the youth of our Nation, couldn't the motion picture industry do likewise and turn it over to kids like Garland and Rooney? They're smarter than any grown-ups I know. In fact, they're so smart they're terrifying.

Director Clarence Brown is house-guesting Lieut. Col. Arthur Danford-Langstrum, who saw many years service in India. Clarence, wanting to make him feel at home, whipped up a real Indian dish of lamb and curry. And where do you suppose he got the chef to cook the meal? At Central Casting! A Hindu, who spends most of his time in the movies wrapping turbans.

Incidentally, things are so bad among our extras that a great many of the women have been forced to go into domestic service to keep from starvation. And they carefully avoid working in any movie home, for fear that would keep them permanently out of pictures, in case times become better.

Connie Moore's shorts, which she wore in "I Wanted Wings," had to be changed for dresses, because the flying cadets at Randolph Field couldn't keep their minds on their work and there were too many crashes.

And wait until you see those bathing pictures of Claudette Colbert, which she did for a national magazine. I don't know why Claudette's tried to hide her nether ends for so long, when they're so pleasant to look upon.

Ty Power's best performance was given in "The Californian" (which was "The Mark of Zorro.") Swell casting, say I. And what an elegant job Janet Beecher did, playing his mother.

Mary Martin and Dick Halliday are sending quart jars of honey to all their pals. They had a wall knocked out in their new home to put in a wiring system and discovered about 200 pounds of honey stored there, which accounted for the buzzing that's been going on. They thought it was a ghost going west!

Director Norman Taurog got a group of beauties for a policemen's ball in "Little Nellie Kelly," and for a powder room sequence he asked a couple of the girls if they knew how to shoot craps. They reckoned they did—proceeded to show him. He said the way they handled the dice would have made our big shot gamblers turn green with envy.

Large Call Sheet Is Issued for Picture

Hollywood's most complicated call sheet was issued at Paramount Studio, as Director Edward Dmytryk filmed an explosion scene for "Mystery Sea Raider," based on an incident in Europe's Second World War.

Fifty extras were ordered to portray Norwegian, French and British ship crews, besides the regular cast of 10 German sailors, 10 American crewmen, 10 passenger survivors and 10 prisoners.

Yogi De Mille Sets Overman for Role

To his numeruos other accomplishments, Cecil B. DeMille has added a unique crystal-gazing ability.

A short time ago Edward H. Griffith used Lynne Overman in the role of a Scotch trader on the West Coast of Africa in "Safari." Before Overman had even finished the part, De Mille had him signed for the part of a Scotch trader in Canada in his all-Technicolor production, "Northwest Mounted Police," over some heated protests.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

New York, Sept. 20 (INS).—Paulette Goddard is out and Barbara Stanwyck is in—in Preston Sturges next, "Lady Eve."

PARSONS

This means that after much pleading Paulette had her way about taking a real vacation with Charlie Chaplin. The Goddard girl has worked as hard as any femme star in Hollywood the last six months, which is probably one of the reasons Para relented and permitted her to plan a two or three months trip.

But perhaps the most important reason for their generosity is that they could get Barbara Stanwyck for Paulette's spot. With the Frank Capra picture "Meet John Doe" coming up, Barbara should be one of the most sought-after girls in Hollywood. Nobody ever works in a Capra picture whose stock doesn't boom. So with Henry Fonda already signed, sealed and all but delivered from Twentieth Century-Fox for this opus, it really gives Sturges two topnotchers for his cast. Didn't I tell you He was rapidly becoming the fair-haired boy among the Para directors?

Parsons, jr., and I were no more than settled in our suite at the Warwick, after the smoothest air trip I've ever made, than news started pouring in. For a minute, with telephones ringing and no pencils at hand (there never are), it seemed just like Hollywood. But what a surprise when one of the first calls came from Esther Ralston, who was a Hollywood glamour girl long before most of the present oomph queens were heard of. Esther, who is married to Ted Lloyd, New York radio writer, really had some news. After five years of retirement from the stage and screen, she had just received word that she was set to play Lillian Lorraine in "Tin Pan Alley" with Alice Faye and Betty Grable and she was flying to the coast immediately. It's only for one picture—but don't be surprised if it leads to a contract.

Remember when Gilda Gray made "Aloma of the South Seas" for Paramount in 1925? Well, Gilda's famous hula yarn is going to be remodeled along sarong lines for Dorothy Lamour—and when you come to think of it Dottie has inherited a lot of the same kind of appeal Gilda had for the Army and Navy 15 years ago. Not so long ago Dorothy was complaining bitterly about too many sarong movies—But she's wisely changed her mind and is going to be a good girl about them. Jack Moss and Stuart Heisler, who made such a hit with "The Biscuit Eater" and who are now collaborating on "D. O. A." ("Dead on Arrival"), will produce "Aloma" for Para.

New York talk I understand now why Irving Berlin has had an offer from every company in the business for "Louisiana Purchase." It is the best musical comedy since those glorious days with Florenz Ziegfeld with girls, music, comedy and beautiful costuming. Zorina is so delightful. Irving told me that he leaves for the coast Sunday to talk over a motion picture deal. There was talk that because of Zorina, who is under contract to Samuel Goldwyn, "Louisiana Purchase" might be made by the Goldwyn Co. Last night I heard that Paramount may talk business with Irving. He and his wife, Ellen, were at the Stork Club. Zorina was also there with Otto Preminger and some other people and so was Billy Gaxton, who, in "Louisiana Purchase," for my money, is one of the best actors on the stage today.

Snapshots of New York and Hollywood collected at random: saw Jimmy Stewart lunching at "Twenty-one" yesterday with a couple of Princeton classmates, Joshua Logan and John Swope. I was also lunching with a Princeton man—Young Jack Williams of the Newell Emmett Advertising Co.; talked with Richard Barthelmess and Jack Benny who were lunching at "Twenty-one;" a committee from Yale University called on me to tell me the motion pictures based on college life are all wrong—but it's a long story and I'll have more to tell about it later; the Eddie Robinsons are here taking in all the shows. Eddie is to be guest of honor at the American druggists convention at which "Dispatch From Reuters" will be previewed.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

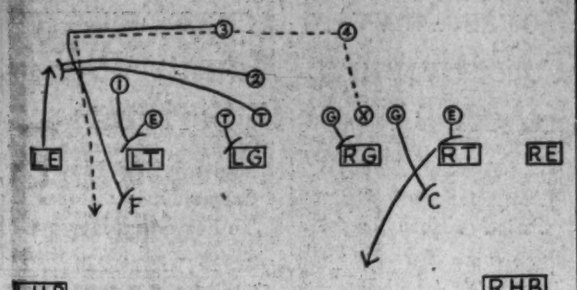
Off Tackle



THIS CUTBACK PLAY OFF TACKLE, OPERATED FROM AN unbalanced line to the right, is designed to fool the opposition into anticipating a sweeping end run. In the diagram sketched by Coach Ray Flaherty and showing the defensive positions in squares, note the sharp change of direction of the ball carrier, the No. 4 back, as indicated by the dotted line. Applying the diagram to the accompanying picture note the No. 1 back, or wingback, moving out straight to the front with his end to put a shoulder block on the defensive left tackle. The No. 2, or inside, back is coming across behind the line directly into the camera shoulder-to-shoulder with his tackle, who has pulled out of the line, to block out the defensive left end—shown advancing across the line of scrimmage. In the top photo, the No. 3 back is leading the play and can be picked up in the bottom photo blocking the defensive fullback, "F" on the diagram. Far from perfect in its performance for the movie camera below, this Redskin play is an old favorite of Dick Todd. It's designed to get a speedy back in the open and depends heavily on downfield blocking by the linemen.

Bogart Keeps D.C. Amateur Links Crown

Donohue Loses, 2-1; First Repeating Champ Since 1929; Play Often Sloppy

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Ralph Bogart became the youngest two-time holder of the District Amateur championship yesterday as he successfully defended his title in a rather sloppily played match with Georgetown University's Jack Donohue over the Manor Club course. The count was 2 and 1.

The 20-year-old Congressional member thus became the first to win the title in successive years since Miller B. Stevinson turned the trick in 1928-29. George Voigt won it three years in a row in the middle 1920's while Roger Peacock and Walter Tuckerman are the only other repeat champions since the De Sibour Rrybourn Trophy was put in play in 1914.

Blasted Jim Gipe

The big happy-go-lucky youngster, with what appears to be the foundation of a great golf game, blasted Jim Gipe out of the way in the morning semifinals, 5 and 4, with a three-under par exhibition, while Donohue, 18-year-old Sioux City junior champ, reached the title round with a 4 and 2 victory over Bill Rochelle. Both losers were from Beaver Dam.

The first nine holes of the title round hit a new low for a championship golf final, but the boys settled down on the back nine and Bogart needed par for a 74 at the finish, while Donohue had par for a 77.

Three Birdies Scored

The new champion's erratic round included three birdies, from putts averaging 10 feet on the first, eleventh and twelfth holes, and an eagle 3 on the par 5 fifteenth, where he reached the green with two ponderous shots and dropped a 15-foot eagle putt. Donohue had two birdies, one conceded after Bogart's eagle on the fifteenth and another via an 18-foot putt on the sixteenth that kept the match alive one more hole.

The young finalists played eighth-flight golf on several holes. Donohue took six shots on the first hole when he couldn't get out of a trap, and six more on the fifth when his drive was in the woods. They halved the par-three third in fives, Bogart flubbing three straight shots while Donohue three-putted. The latter won the easy par-four seventh with a five when Bogart played through the woods from tee to green. Bogart took six on the ninth when he tried to putt a chip shot, and six more on the fourteenth.

Davis Takes Close Nod Over Marteliano

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Young Al Davis tonight won a close decision over Tony Marteliano after ten thumping thrill-packed rounds.

Immediately after the fight Mike Jacobs announced that although he had intended to give the winner of the bout a crack at the world's welterweight title, tonight's fight was so close that Davis and Marteliano were being matched for November 29. The return match will decide the welterweight challenger.

With Marteliano ahead in the round scoring, Davis unleashed a left hook that sent the Italian sprawling on the canvas. Marteliano got up at the count of nine and the bell rang ending the fight and saving Tony from an almost certain knockout.

The fight was so close that even after Davis' explosive punch in the final round, the officials were divided in their voting and Davis received a split decision. Referee Arthur Donovan and Judge Patsy Haley voted for Davis, who scaled 145¼ pounds, and Judge George Lecron balloted for Marteliano, who weighed 146½.

Marteliano, a squat-shouldered black-haired little Italian, brought the 9,312 cash customers to their feet in the early sessions when he romped away with the first three rounds, not only giving blond Davis a boxing lesson, but actually outpunching him in the exchanges.

Blend of Drama and Comedy as Tigers Whip Indians

Eight Detroit Policemen Guard Tribe

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 20.—The Detroit police force took no chances that an overwrought Tiger fan would go to work on a Cleveland player in today's opener of the series between the two clubs. Eight bluecoats were stationed around the Indian dugout. No trouble developed, however.

The Cleveland club took its usual "cry-baby" razzing from Tiger fans. Just before game time one Detroit rooter pushed a doll carriage on the field. Instead of annoying the Indians, the incident seemed to amuse them. Outfielder Ben Chapman placed his bat in the buggy and rolled it toward home plate for the benefit of the photographers.

The high school boys who greeted the Indians at the railroad station last night with a barrage of eggs and fruit didn't think their joke was so funny today. School officials started an investigation and promised punishment for the culprits.

Quiet Del Baker, Tiger manager, got the psychological jump on Indian mentor Oscar Vitt. Posing for photographers before the game, Baker suddenly reached out and felt Vitt's pulse.

"Gosh," Del remarked. "You're actually nervous, Oscar."

Buck Newsom went to bed at 6:30 p. m. Thursday but it didn't help much since he was blasted from the box . . . More than 1,000 Cleveland fans came up for the game . . . Detroit hadn't seen so many sportswriters since the World Series of '34 and '35—there were 32 men covering the contest for papers from all parts of the Nation.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This department's opinion has been retailing for 3 cents for so long, a decent value seems to have been struck. So for what it is worth here's what we think of the Cleveland-Detroit death struggle for the American League pennant.

POVICH

We think the Tigers will beat out the Indians, because we always like to string along with the puncher. The issue is clear enough. Can the Tigers' power offset the Cleveland pitching and defense? Here is one resolute vote for the affirmative:

Any comparison of the two teams' defenses beyond the pitching must certainly favor the Indians. Holding down the same positions at shortstop and second base which the unparalled Lou Boudreau-Ray Mack combination occupy for the Cleveland club are the aging Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell, who cover little more ground than what they stand on. And at third base for the Tigers is Frank Higgins likewise no gazelle.

But in the games at Detroit, at least, the Tiger infielders are at no terrific disadvantage. You ought to see the Detroit ground crew at work on that Briggs Stadium infield in the morning before a game. They slow it up with so much hose-water that it is exuding moisture even at game time. The sodden infield brings ground balls and the Tiger infielders together. It is pardonable strategy.

Cleveland will win or lose with its pitching. The Indians, with their lack of power, can't win a badly pitched ball game. The Tigers can. They don't require the same pitching finesse as the Indians. Earlier this week, the Tigers scored 40 runs in a four-game series with the Athletics while the Indians were scoring only eight runs in a three-game series with Washington.

Bob Feller has expressed his willingness to pitch relief roles in addition to taking his regular turn with only two or three days rest, but there's a limit to human endurance (Copyright). Against Washington the other day, Feller made his fifth appearance in the Indians last nine games. He won his game, but he was dog-tired and admitted it. On a seemingly overworked Feller will hinge most of Cleveland's hopes.

The Cleveland pitching showed to advantage against the Nats, holding Washington to three runs in three games, but the fact is that the Cleveland pitchers weren't beating much. If the Nats for the past month haven't been the weakest hitting club in the league they've been too painfully close to it. In Cleveland they were simply a gang of feather merchants with the bat.

We don't mean to imply, either, that the Tigers pitching is of the horrible sort. Buck Newsom, Tommy Bridges and Schoolboy Rowe are not a trio that any manager must send into a series with advance apologies. They can be classed as at least as potent as Feller, Harder and Milnar in a short series, although none can match the individual brilliance of Feller.

Not without reason perhaps have the Tigers been regarded as a more courageous club than the Indians this year. Their presence at the top of the league despite their glaring infield weakness and spotty pitching attests to the fortitude of the Detroit Club. Hank Greenberg and Rudy York have been able to take up the slack with their slugging.

But the Indians in the last ten days have been hanging in there in a manner that deserves applause. They checked their slump just in time to avoid dropping out of the race, and then they began to win games despite their lack of power. The pitchers, backed by a swell infield, and Roy Weatherly's outfielding, carried the load.

Racing down to the wire as they are, the Indians and Tigers are perfect contrasts in potential pennant winners. The Indians have the pitching and defense and can't hit. The Tigers have tolerable pitching, can slug and can't field much.

If the Indians win the pennant, the reasons will be three and they are obvious to every club that has faced 'em: (1) Feller and his 25 victories, (2) Weatherly and his consistent hitting and outfielding, and (3) Lou Boudreau.

Lello Scores Over Irving Eldridge

New oYrk, Sept. 20 (AP).—Pete Lello, sturdy Chicago clouter, qualified for a shot at the lightweight championship tonight in whipping Irving Eldridge, of New York, in a ten-round slugging match in Madison Square Garden. Lello weighed 133¾, Eldridge 134.

Although Eldridge cut him over both eyes and received a gashed left eye in return, the Chicagoan punched out a clear margin throughout the ten rounds.

Victors Score Five Runs In Big Frame

Detroit Now a Full Game Ahead of Foes; Newhouser Receives Credit for Victory

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 20.—In the wildest baseball spectacle Detroit has been a party to since the World Series days of 1934 and 1935, the Tigers today nosed out the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 5, in the opening battle of the three-game series for American League supremacy. By the victory Detroit took a one-game lead over Cleveland in the American League pennant race.

For seven innings Detroit had seemed a hopelessly beaten baseball team. Mel Harder, 30-year-old Cleveland right-hander, had held the Tigers to three hits and a single run and was riding along on a comfortable 4-to-1 lead.

Then, without warning, Detroit struck and before the eighth inning was over the Tigers had scored five runs, chased Harder and Bobby Feller, who was charged with the loss, and locked up the ball game. Play was halted repeatedly in the inning while groundkeepers removed from the field straw hats and derbies thrown by enthusiastic members of the partisan crowd of 22,508.

Detroit Is Outhit

The Tigers were outhit by the staggering margin of 15 to 9, but the Indians, as panicky as they were when they lost three straight games here earlier in the month, kicked in with four errors.

The story of today's game is the eighth inning and therefore it is repeated here:

Billy Sullivan batted for Dick Bartell and grounded out. Barney McCosky walked. Charley Gehringer singled to right, McCosky going to third. Manager Oscar Vitt of the Indians, came from the Cleveland dugout and, after a five-minute conference with Harder, Catcher

Clift's 4-Run Homer Wins For Browns

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 20.—Harlond Clift's twentieth home run of the season with the bases jammed in the first inning helped the St. Louis Browns to a 7-to-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox tonight before 10,263 paying customers.

Rookie Maurice Newlin, a 23-game winner this season for the Browns' San Antonio Club in the Texas League, was credited with the victory, although he had to be relieved by Bill Trotter, who finished.

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox announced he would protest the game as the result of a decision by Umpire Hubbard calling Larry Rosenthal out at second on a force play in the ninth after the Browns had protested when Umpire Kolls ruled him safe. Pinch-Hitter Ken Silvestri later singled, driving in a run.

Gridder's Mother Asks President To Release Son

Garfield, N. J., Sept. 20 (AP).—Johnny Orlovsky's widowed mother today petitioned President Roosevelt to release her boy from the National Guard and allow him to play tomorrow when Garfield High School faces Nutley in a crucial football game.

Garfield Coach Arthur Argauer said Mrs. Orlovsky told the President in a telegram that she had worked in factories so her children could be educated and that she wanted her son to finish high school. Johnny, backfield ace on the high school team, has applied for a discharge, but no disposition of his request has been made.

The 19-year-old footballer is quartered at the Passaic Armory, and is allowed two hours freedom from military duties daily to attend school, but his company commander has ruled he can't play football while in the army because the game is too "hazardous."

Roy Zimmerman to Make Redskin League Debut Tomorrow

Triple-Threat Rookie Gets Coach's Okay

Ray Hare, Bob Fisher Also Are Expected To See Action in Game With Giants

The Redskins will get a large dose of sophomore talent for that run down feeling tomorrow at Griffith Stadium when they take on the New York Giants.

At least three rookies—including the triple-threat understudy to Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock, Roy Zimmerman—are expected to make their debut in National League football after warming the bench during last Sunday's 24-17 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

If any signs of that let-up in play suffered last Sunday and all this week in signal drills occur, Coach Ray Flaherty is expected to start rotating his line-up in rapid order.

Haven't Played Yet

Zimmerman, halfback draftee from San Jose State, and Ray Hare, blocking back from Gonzaga, are the only rookie backs on the squad who failed to get in last Sunday's game, while Bob Fisher, 212-pound tackle from Southern California and the Los Angeles Bulldogs, has yet to see action in the line.

"We are going to use our rookies a lot more Sunday than we did against the Dodgers," Flaherty said yesterday. "I'm pretty sure that Zimmerman will be out there, anyway."

Bob Seymour, fullback from Oklahoma, and Bob Hoffman, blocking back from Southern California, made their pro league debut last Sunday along with Sandy Sanford, the field-goal-kicking end from Alabama who has yet to kick a placement for the Redskins, but all saw only a few moments of play.

Will Add to Aerial Attack

Zimmerman's presence will add much strength to the Skins' aerial attack, which last week rested heavily on the shoulders of Baugh. Slingin' Sam turned up this week with a sore pitching wing as a result of a bruised muscle, but will be in the starting backfield tomorrow. His mates will be the veteran trio of Max Krause at the No. 2, or blocking back; Ed Justice on the wing, and Jimmy Johnston at fullback.

Clyde Shugart, who steps out of his guard position to back up the line on defense, was the latest addition to the Pulled Muscle Drum and Bugle Corps yesterday. Pinckert, Red Morgan and Fisher have been hobbling through signal drills with pulled leg muscles, but all are expected to play against the Giants.

Only 3,000 seats remained to be sold at Redskin offices last night, and General Manager Jack Espey again pounded the fact home that there will be no standing room sold at any of the Skins' home games this season.

Packers Favored

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 20 (INS).—The Green Bay Packers, defending champions of the National Football League, tonight were quoted 6 to 5 favorites over the Chicago Bears whom they meet here Sunday. The game will inaugurate the league season for the Bears and be the second for the Packers who last Sunday defeated the Philadelphia Eagles 27 to 20.

N. C. State Beats William and Mary Eleven, 16 to 0

Special Dispatch to The Post

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20.—North Carolina State put in an early bid for 1940 grid honors here tonight when it scored in all but one quarter and smashed William and Mary eleven, 16-0.

Scarcely 4 minutes of the first quarter had elapsed when the Wolfpack tallied its first touchdown, a pass from Watts to Owens turning the trick from the 12-yard line.

In the second quarter State was forced to resort to the toe of Fehley for their only score. After missing a first down by 2 yards on the Indians' 12, State moved the kickout steadily back to the 4-yard line, from which point the stellar back place-kicked perfectly.

Finally, in the fourth session, N. C. State registered the final points of the game. Watts had kicked to W. and M. on the latter's own 48. Then Matthews attempted pass was intercepted by Owens who romped 40 yards before being stopped. On a reverse Huckabee accounted for the touchdown.

J. D. Draper Scores 193-Yard Ace; Second of Career

J. D. Draper scored his second hole-in-one yesterday, knocking in a 193-yard-two-iron shot on the third hole of the White Flint Golf Course. The ball hit on the green while a foursome was playing and trickled in the cup while Bernie Richardt was holding the pin.

Draper, who played the nine in 33 strokes, one under par, was playing with H. G. Arwood and O. L. Warrington.

Invaders Win, 28-8, in Best Ball And Scotch Foursome Matches; Mrs. Vare, Mrs. Howe Lead

Philadelphia's all-star women's golf team proved entirely too strong for the District's inter-city line-up yesterday at Columbia Country Club, winning 28 to 8 in the morning and afternoon best ball and scotch foursome matches.

The visitors, with two former national champions in the lineup—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, the six-time titlist, and Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Howe, a three-time winner—took a 13½-to-4½ lead in the best ball play and increased their margin by a point in the alternate shot Scotch foursome play, winning 14½ to 3½.

Everyone Scores

All 12 members of the District team figured in the scoring, however, with Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, and Louise Claytor, Chevy Chase, the No. 2 team, winning 2 points for honors among the local players. Their opponents were Mrs. R. E. Seltzer, jr., and Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, jr., sister of National Amateur Finalist Duff McCullough.

Mrs. Vare, playing in the top position for the visitors, and Mrs. Norman Lack, a member of the Philadelphia section from York, Pa., won 2 points from the District's top duo, Mrs. W. R. Stokes and Mrs. Leo Walper, in both matches. The locals won the first nine in the morning and afternoon, but lost the back 9 and 18 on the last hole each time.

Mrs. Howe Victor

Mrs. Howe, the 1909 National Women's champion, played in the fifth bracket with Mrs. Libby Jarrett and swept 3 points in the best ball play and won 2½ in the Scotch event over Mrs. J. W. Godfrey and Mrs. Thomas Brendon.

The morning's individual scoring honors went to Mrs. Walter Acuff and Ann Krumbhaar, of the visitors, who each played the long course in 79 strokes.

Mrs. Pray and Miss Claytor won the first nine and the 18-home match, 5 up, in the morning, but lost the back nine. In the afternoon they lost all three ways. That was the only match in which the local team was able to show a profit, while in the afternoon District Champion Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Landra Platt earned a draw with Mrs. Acuff and Mrs. Dilkes.

Score Two Ways

Outside of the first team, Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg and Mrs. K. S. Giles were the only local duo to score in both types of play, winning a point in the morning and a half point in the afternoon. The players hit alternate drives and alternate shots in the second round with both matches on the Nassau scoring system.

Mrs. H. J. Cooper and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer, who had two birdie deuces between them in the morning, salvaged a half point on the eighteenth green when Mrs. Cooper chipped poorly but made up for it by dropping a 15-footer to square the back nine.

Reds' Pitcher Hurt Wrestling Self In Pullman Berth

MOORE

Moore said he dreamed he was engaged in a wrestling bout, so realistic did the match become that Moore shattered the window of his berth.

Slight cuts will be healed within a few days, reported Dr. Richard Rohde, team trainer, but Moore won't be able to hurl until next week when the Reds meet the Cardinals in St. Louis.

Bogart Retains D. C. Amateur Championship

Donohue Loses, 2 and 1, To First Repeating Champion Since 1929

However, the good and bad golf made an interesting round out of it. Bogart was three up at the fifth, one up at the turn, and then his second consecutive birdie put him three up on the twelfth. Donohue, as he explained later, just saw his game that had been good all week go to pieces.

The championship flight lost prestige to some of the other finals. Max Taylor chipped in the cup from over the green on the nineteenth hole to beat Julian Murphy in the second flight, and then Murphy's bid to tie, a chip shot, stopped just inches short. Martin McCarthy won the third flight and was never over 73 in the match-play rounds, including a nine of 33 yesterday morning.

Bogart definitely clinched the rank of the outstanding local amateur of the year as he was runner-up in the Chevy Chase Invitation and qualified here and in New York for the National Amateur. Donohue qualified two strokes lower than Bogart at Winged Foot, and lost to Gus Moreland on the eighteenth hole of the first round.

To Play with Hoyas

The Iowa youngster, who will be 19 next week, will probably be the mainstay of the Georgetown University golf team this season. He won two junior tournaments in Sioux City, the Iowa Resorters event, and the Sioux City Country Club championship, all this past season. He entered the local tournament as a member of Capital Club, home course of the Georgetown team.

Bogart's path to his second straight title included a qualifying 75, third low score, and somewhat one-sided victories over Joe Balestri, George Miller, Jim Gipe and Donohue. The runner-up, who also qualified with a 75, defeated W. G. McCreery, Roger Peacock, in the biggest upset of the tournament, and Rochelle.

CHAMPIONSHIP SEMIFINALS—J. J. Donoghue (Capital) defeated Billy Rochelle (Beaver Dam), 4 and 3; Ralph Bogart (Congressional) defeated Jimmy Gipe (Beaver Dam), 5 and 4.

Boston College-Centre Head Day's Grid Card

College Football Season Arrives in Full Bloom Today With Action in Every Section; Rocky Mountain Only Conference Opener

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Not exactly full blown, what with most games of the warm-up variety and baseball still the big show, football season nevertheless arrives in every section of the country tomorrow.

Nearly all conferences still have a week or two before opening championship campaigns. The Rocky Mountain group, however, gets under way with Western State and Montana State tangling at Bozeman. These two teams did not meet last year.

There's a slight intersectional flavor in the first football dish, too. Boston College entertains Centre's Praying Colonels at Newton, Mass., and Hardin-Simmons takes a trip to Shreveport to get together with Centenary.

Most Teams Idle

Except for Boston College's curtain-raiser, none of the better-than-average Eastern teams swings into action. Nor does any Pacific Coast or Midwestern giant start the ball rolling this week. In the central area, Iowa State of the Missouri Valley Conference takes on Luther and South Dakota meets South Dakota Wesleyan.

Dixie probably will hold the spotlight all by itself this first Saturday, with teams in both the Southern and Southeastern conferences going to work, all in non-conference warfare.

Headliner of the day appears to be at Lexington, Ky., where Kentucky opens up with Baldwin Wallace, and may encounter trouble. In addition to the Wildcats, other Southeastern Conference outfits on the program are Louisiana State, which runs into Louisiana Tech, and Mississippi, which takes on Union.

S. C. Elevens Play

Half a dozen Southern Conference squads will show the folks how it's done. These feature Clemson against Presbyterian, North Carolina against Appalachian; V. M. I. against Roanoke; V. P. I. against Catawba; Wake Forest against William Jewell and Washington and Lee against Hampden-Sydney. North Carolina State opened tonight against William and Mary in a conference game and Richmond got under way against Apprentice School.

In the Southwest, the closest to a major affair finds Arizona State meeting Texas Mines.

Redbirds Beat Colonels, 14-5, In Play-Offs

Columbus Assumes 2-1 Lead in Series; Dixie Walker Stars

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 20.—getting off to an 8-run lead in the first inning, the Columbus Redbirds coasted to a 14-5 victory over the Louisvill Colonels tonight and too a 2-to-1 game lead in their American Association playoff series.

Dixie Walker led the initial frame assault, cracking two triples and driving in two runs. He also rapped out two singles later in the game. Harry Brecheen gave the Colonels 11 hits, but neved was in danger.

Minneapolis, Sept. 20 (AP).—Minneapolis evened the series in the Shaughnessy playoff against Kansas City here tonight by winning the fourth game, 5-1. Mickel Haefner pitched seven-hit ball for the local clug and except for a wild pitch by himself would have had a shutout.

None of the Kansas City hits went for extra bases.

The fifth game will be played here Saturday afternoon. Walter Tauscher, who has beaten the Blues four times this season will do the pitching for the home club while Johnny Lindell, an 18-game winner during the regular schedule was to twirl for the champions.

Hoyas, Navy To Scrimmage In Secret

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20.—When the football squads of Goergetown University and the Naval Academy line up for practice scrimmage here tomorrow afternoon, the general public will be excluded, it was announced today by officials of the Navy Athletic Association. This action was taken in view of an agreement between coaches of the rival squads.

To carry the mandate into effect a canvas screen 7 feet high has been thrown about the huge field upon which the Middies hold their workouts, same as the custom of many years standing, when the Tars settle into secert practice fo rthe Army or other big games. Only Naval officers, midshipmen of the regiment, coaches and attendants of the respective squads will be permitted within the enclosure. It was pointed out that the practice was arranged as strictly informal, and it is desired to keep it as much that way as possible.

Although the practice will not be in accord with regular game conditions, Navy gridders nevertheless are keyed for the action and it is also welcomed by the staff of coaches. Against a team of the strength of Georgetown which has not suffered defeat in two years, the Naval contingent expects to derive material benefit in their preparations for the season's opening game with William and Mary College next Saturday, and the same is true as to the Hoyas who are working for their inaugural with Roanoke College, also on Saturday.

With tomorrow's workout in view, and feeling that the Middies got in plenty of scrimmaging against Rutgers Tuesday and Wednesday, Navy mentors today again confined their program to drills in the new plays and formations and various other phases of work. The several players who have been nursing minor hurts, including Capt. Dick Fosjer, end, will be kept out of tomorrow's heavy action.

Colonials, Cards Scrimmage Today

In preparation for the meeting rival coaches yesterday excused their squads from rough work and concentrated on perfecting their plays. C. U. Coach Bergman, following out his announced plans for featuring razzle-dazzle tactics this season, handed his Cardinals a brand-new set of deception plays.

In conjunction with practice, C. U. held a place-kicking contest to decide who is to be entrusted with the task of converting points for the Cardinals this season. Clinching the job for himself, Husky Sophomore Guard John Cherello booted ten out of ten through the placements. Cherello, in scrimmage with Maryland, maintained a fine conversion average.

Today's battle with C. U. may be G. W.'s last scrimmage before opening the season against Mount St. Mary's on Friday night. Unseasonal weather and a few player injuries may prompt Coach Reinhart to forego heavy contact.

On the casualty list at present are Fullback Walter Welc, with a shoulder injury, and Guard Floyd McGlinn, with a sprained ankle.

Petworth Meets Taft

Petworth A. C. unlimited baseball team has canceled a game scheduled today with Moses A. C. at New Market, Va., and instead will meet Taft A. C. here on the latter's diamond.

Local Alumni Fete Wm. Jewell Grid Team Tomorrow

The 26 members of William Jewell College's football team, which meets Wake Forest today at Winston-Salem, N. C., will be guests of honor here tomorrow night at a banquet at the Chastleton Hotel.

Alumni of the Liberty (Mo.) schools will sponsor the dinner, which will celebrate Jewell's new intersectional game policy. The gridders are expected to arrive here tomorrow morning and follow a sightseeing schedule before attending the banquet at 6:30 p. m.

Outstanding of the 30 members of Washington's William Jewell Club are Representative Clarence Cannon, Representative William L. Nelson, Prof. G. A. Ross, Dr. W. O. Lewis and Dr. Dudley King.

Terps Beat Mounts, 40-0, In Scrimmage

Improved Md. Eleven Scores Easily; Hoyas To Leave 6 at Home

By Jack Munhall

Little Mount St. Mary's College of Emittsburg, Md., yesterday took a 40-0 shellacking in a scrimmage with Maryland that served as additional proof of two popular contentions:

1. That the Terps are going to have considerable more football team this season than was expected, and

2. That George Washington will have scant trouble beating Mount St. Mary's in its opening game at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

Maryland, outclassing Coach "Bull" Draper's invaders in every department while showing mark of improvement over recent efforts, particularly displayed a more effective pass defense. Two of the Terps' six touchdowns came on lengthy runs following intercepted passes.

Berry Runs 70 Yards

Hal Berry, sophomore halfback from Tech High of Washington, plucked an errant enemy aerial to gallop 70 yards on the day's longest gain. Another sophomore back, Jack Mier, fled 55 yards to a score on a second interception.

Rounding out a highly successful afternoon for Maryland sophomore backs, Ray Grelecki, a scat-back from Baltimore City College, racked up two touchdowns, and Don Shockey, from Waynesboro (Pa.) High scored one. The sixth Old Liner score fell to the speedy legs of Senior Joe Murphy.

Outstanding in the Maryland line which tackled and blocked far better than it did in three previous scrimmages with George Washington were Max Hunt and Frank Heyer at guards. Bob Smith was back at center after a trial as blocking back and performed with his usual skill for the brief period he played. Again Smith seemed unbothered by the trick knee which handicapped him throughout last season.

Injury-Ridden Hoyas Play Middies Today

Coach Jack Hagerty disclosed yesterday that the following Georgetown players will not make the trip: guard, Mark Ostinato, sprained ankle; halfbacks, Ken McNichol and Al Kull, injured leg and shoulder respectively; quarterback, Walter O'Connell, shoulder separation; end, Ken Engels, infected foot, and tackle, Oscar Harte, damaged shuolder.

Closed to Public

The Georgetown-Navy scrimmage, to be conducted under actual game rules, will be closed to the public, Commander Ward P. Davis, Navy director of athletics, emphasized yesterday. Among those to be barred are scouts of any rival team on either the Georgetown or Navy schedule.

Georgetown's starting lineup for the scrimmage, Hagerty announced, will be ends, Art Lemke and Chris Pavich; tackles, Joe Daniels and Earl Fulllilove; guards, Ed McMahon and Augie Llo; center, Allen Matuza; quarterback, Joe McFadden; halfbacks, Lou Ghecas and Jules Koshlap, and fullback, Jim Castiglia.

Hagerty, in an experiment, will test Tackle Daniels in the punter's role. The first-string Hoya lineup includes only one sophomore, Pavich who is filling in for Mike Kopcik. 1939 regular who is not in the best of condition. With the exception of Lemke, who is a junior, all other starting players are seniors.

Brisk Ticket Sale Reported For Bike Races

A brisk advance sale of tickets for the debut of international six-day bicycle racing at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night was reported yesterday as the bowl-shaped track neared construction.

The races will start at 9 p. m. tomorrow and end next Saturday at 11 p. m.

Torchy Peden, celebrated Canadian red-head who has been in town several days acting as a good-will ambassador for the pedaling circuit, will be joined by many of his star rivals this afternoon at a workout at Riverside. The workout, starting at 2 o'clock, will be open to the public. Attending spectators will be instructed in the rules that govern six-day racing.

The track, being installed by William Mulvey at an approximate cost of $3,500, is scheduled to be completed early this morning by a force of about 100 workers.

Preceding their riders, bicycles of all sizes and descriptions were arriving at Riverside yesterday. The largish Mr. Peden, who stands 6 feet 2 and weighs more than 200 pounds, rides one of the smallest bicycles in the circuit, and 5-foot-3-inch Letourner, the French star, one of the largest.

Furr Shows Punch Kayoing Sparring Mate

Vic Finnazzo Floored by Right Hand

D. C. Welter Impress In Drill for Title Bout With Armstrong Here Monday Night

By Al Hailey

Phil Furr yesterday staged a one-round preview of what he'll do—he hopes—to Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong Monday night in Griffith Stadium by knocking out Sparmate Vic Finnazzo in a workout at Meadowbrook Farms.

The 30-year-old ex-soldier did the deed with a right-hand smash to the jaw—four of them, in fact—before the Baltimore facsimile of Hammering Hank floated to the canvas smiling happily to himself over the sudden burst of twittering birds onto the scene.

Furr rushed over to the fallen gladiator immediately after the knockdown, helped him to his feet and after a brief rest boxed three more rounds with Finnazzo concentrating on a body attack.

Furr Is Confident

"That's just the way it'll be when I get in there with Armstrong," Furr puffed heavily after the workout as Chris Dundee hovered nervously about his perspiring fighter.

Boy, if you can only hit like that Monday night we've got nothing to worry about," Dundee confided to Philbert and the public in general.

As a matter of fact, Furr did look dangerous against the harmless Baltimorean. His footwork was smooth, he unveiled a terrific pounding to the body with both hands in close, and he was shooting his right inside Finnazzo's flailing arms with great precision.

"I'll take this Armstrong just as I did Mamakos," Furr said confidently. "I had him on the floor seven timse before they stopped the fight. That's something nobody else has ever done, and Steve fights just like Armstrong. Fact is, I think Steve's tougher than Henry and probably would beat him."

Phil Works 8 Rounds

Armstrong, already below the weight limit for the 15-round title fight, didn't do any work at all yesterday but with his manager, Eddie Mead, and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez went to Newport News, Va., to referee an Elks benefit fight last night. The stocky little champion will return today to Turner's arena for a 1 o'clock workout.

Meanwhile, members of the Variety Club, whose welfare fund will benefit from the title affair, staged a luncheon for boxing officials, members of the press and radio and announced that some 1,250 ringside seats had been reserved.

Turner Predicts 20,000 Crowd

Since Eddie Mead's decision to defy the New York moguls, the ticket sale has taken a definite hop and Promoter Joe Turner yesterday predicted a crowd of 20,000 will be on hand Monday night.

The card will get good support, with Maynard Daniels, the Marine reservist, coming back under new management to engage Buddy Moore, New York's "second Joe Louis," in the six-round semifinal heavyweight affair. In other six-rounders, Ray Landis, Furr's protege, meets Pete Sisco, of Baltimore; Billy Bullock meets Everett Rightmire, Armstrong's stablemate; Justo Jiminez meets Jackie Carter, all lightweight encounters.

A Long but Futile Gain for G. W. High Eleven

Johnny Shelton (25), George Washington Washington High back, reeled off a gain of 30 yards in this second quarter dash, but the scoring threat against James Mon roe High, of Fredericksburg, fizzled. Shelto n was chased out of bounds. G. W. scored twice in the fourth period to win, 14-0

G. W. Eleven Victors Over James Monroe

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 20.—Held at bay for three quarters by an outweighed but plucky James Monroe High School eleven of Fredericksburg, George Washington High turned on the power in the final period to registed two touchdowns and a 14-0 victory over the down-State gridders in northern Virginia's first scholastic football contest here tonight.

A throng estimated at 6,500 fans jammed the G. W. bowl to see the Alexandrians uncork an explosive offensive display in the last eight minutes of play, after three previous scoring threats were stymied by the desperate defensive play of the scrappy Monroe eleven.

Johnny Shelton crashed over the center for the Presidents' first score from the ½-foot line early in the final period to climax a sustained drive of 40 yards, while less than two minutes before the final whistle sounded, diminutive Marty Foltz wriggled 9 yards for the second touchdown. In both instances, Capt. Howard Hicks added the extra points on perfect placement kicks.

The Yellow Jackets from Fredericksburg fought with their backs to the wall throughout the contest, and on no occasion were they in scoring position, but their stellar defensive play brought bursts of cheers even from the partisan Alexandria fans. The visitors never succeeded in crossing the Presidents' 40-yard line, and they chalked up only 3 first downs to 12 for the victors.

Challedon Favorite In Rich Race Today

Brann's 4-Year-Old Installed Choice In $25,000 Narragansett Special After Half-Mile Workout of 47 2-5; 11 Will Start

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 20.—Although he disappointed them in his last New England start, the railbirds agreed that William L. Brann's 4-year-old Challedon was a stickout for the $25,000 added Narragansett Special today when they saw him reel off a half-mile in 47 2-5 seconds.

Challedon appeared much sharper than he did about two months ago, when he finished behind Eight Thirty and Hash in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs, and despite his top weight of 130 pounds he appeared destined to enter the starting gate here tomorrow as an odds-on favorite in the field of 11.

Hash was another eligible to be worked out this morning. The Greentree Stud's star romped an easy half in 0:48 4/5 under stout restraint and appeared in prime condition after his winning effort in last week's Edgemere at Aqueduct.

Only two others entered for this mile and three-sixteenths test have been rated high up by the handicappers, Arnold Hangar's Dit, the only 3-year-old on the list, and the Valdina Farm's Viscounty, which accounted for the King Philip Handicap here two weeks ago.

Challedon will be called upon to give 8 pounds to the dangerous Hash, 23 to Dit and 14 to the active Valdina colt, which has made more starts this season than any entered for the special.

Two of the other seven were considered doubtful starters, L. E. Ogle's Busy K, which drew the lowest impost of 100 pounds, and Sundodger, which appears overmatched, despite his 102-pound burden. It is likely that Busy K will go postward only if it comes up mud.

Since big-name horses seldom have enhanced their prestige in New England competition, it is likely that such local favorites as Whitey Abel's Honey Cloud, the Shandon Farm's Burning Star, both in with 112, and Counterpoise, which registered a smashing win here this week, will receive stout support from the wagerers, who demand long prices. Also entered were Gilded Knight and Yale-O-Nine, which have been unimpressive in recent outings.

Chevy Chase Horse Show Judges Named

James Guitar, of Warrenton, and Esther M. Palmer, of Arlington, have accepted invitations to judge hunters at the Chevy Chase Horse Show on East-West highway tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. N. B. Timanus and Mrs. Andrew J. Cummings will officiate in the pony and junior classes, and Ralph Counselman and Quinton L. Comer will score open jumpers, according to Donald C. Bradley, chairman of the committee.

Local exhibitors in the event include Jackie Warren with her new mount, David, recently purchased from Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Llangollen barns; Fenton M. Fadeley with his jumping mare, Lacquer Lady; Mercer Fadeley with Skippy, Charles Carrico and his Recall, U. S. Randle with his string of hunters and open horses, Charles Fletcher's Nannette, Florence Fitzgerald's Dan's Rocksand, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bogley's Ringmaster, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy, Capt. Charles B. McClelland's Smacko, the Government-owned Rusty and Inclusive, from Fort Myer; Angelina Carrabelli's Brown Betty, and Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Dunstar.

Also on hand will be Marrian Curran's Tahra, Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry's Scamp, Adam R. Heinrich's Good Friday, Sam Agnew's Kitty Vee, Eddie Talbert's He'll Try, Blanche Johnson's Good Times, George Lawrence's Tiger Annie, the Sligo Riding School's Cody, Dean Rathbun, jr.'s Miss Victorian, David Belding's Star Boy and Star Roan, Mrs. Lee Counselman's Kristi, Elizabeth Marsh's Gold Vein, and a long list of others.

Eighteen classes make up the prize list. In the hunter division, all conformation will be judged on a percentage basis at 12:30, just prior to the road hacks' event, and the same scoring will be used throughout the show.

Tigers Blast Feller in 8th To Win, 6-5

Detroit Scores Five Runs in Big Frame To Take First Game Of Crucial Series

Hank Greenberg smashed a line single to center that scored McCosky and sent Gehringer to third. Rudy York belted a 3-and-2 pitch to right field for a single counting Gehringer and when Roy Bell fumbled the ball momentarily Greenberg surprised Cleveland by tearing around the bases and scoring the tying run. York reached second on the boot and came home when Frank Higgins singled to right. That was all for Feller, who had endeavored to pitch with only one day's rest, and Joe Dobson became the third Cleveland pitcher. Pete Fox slapped a single off Ken Keltner's glove and Higgins reached third. On an attempted squeeze play George Tebbetts missed the ball and Higgins was trapped on the base line by Catcher Pytlak. Tebbetts then walked. Bruce Campbell, a former Indian, batted for Pitcher Harold Newhouser and singled to right. Fox scored, but Tebbetts was out when he overslid third.

There was plenty of second guessing tonight as to whether it was advisable strategy to have lifted Harder, who had stood the Tigers on their heads for seven innings.

Tribe Threatens in Ninth

With Alton Benton, Detroit's No. 1 relief pitcher, on the hill, the Indians made a gallant attempt to tie the score in the ninth, scoring a run after one was out on a double by Roy Weatherly and singles by Lou Boudreau and Hal Trosky. With the tying run on third and a winner on second, Benton struck out Bell and got Ken Keltner on a weak tap to Croucher.

Blustering Louis (Buck) Newsom started for Detroit, but was removed after five and two-thirds innings of feeble pitching in which he allowed 11 hits and four of Cleveland's five runs.

The Indians took the lead in the third when they acquired a run on Weatherly's double and Boudreau's single. Detroit tied the score in the fourth on a walk to Gehringer, a single by Greenberg and a long fly from the bat of York.

Two Cleveland runs crossed the plate in the fifth. Pytlak opened with a single and went to second on Ben Chapman's base hit after Harder had fanned. Weatherly scored Pytlak with a single to right and Chapman reached third from where he scored after the catch on Boudreau's long fly to right.

Newsom Knocked Out in Sixth

Newsom was finally batted from the hill in the sixth. Bell opened with a double and scored on Keltner's single to left. Keltner was forced by Ray Mack. Pytlak flied out, but when Harder singled Manager Del Baker decided to remove Newson and Clay Smith, a rookie right-hander, came in and retired Chapman on a pop fly.

In the second game of the series tomorrow Cleveland plans to use Southpaw Al Milnar. Detroit will counter with Lynwood Rowe, who has won 15 games and lost but 3 in baseball's great comeback of the year.

Although the Indians lost, they did succeed in stopping Detroit's famed home-run attack which had produced a new major record of 17 straight games in which the club had at least one four-base clout.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 20.—Cupping an ear at the Pat Comiskey workout in the Pioneer Gym:

JACK DEMPSEY—Baer's gotta whip this kid in four or five rounds and he'll take a terrible beating. Max's gotta get in there and show who's boss, if he expects to win. Comiskey's the best-looking young heavyweight I've seen in years, but he's a couple of years away from his prime. If he licks Baer they'll want to put him in there with Louis right away, and he's no more ready for Louis right now than I am. They oughta give him those Novas and Savolds, if he gets past Baer.

CONSIDINE

PROF. BILLY McCARNEY—This kid's developed the best left hand I've seen since Charley Wienert. It's not a finder . . . a feeler. It's a jolt. But what the dang am I doing talking about Comiskey. I'm hired to put the sweller on for Baer. Max thinks he can lick this fellow. He says that the only guys Comiskey ever licked were a couple of barbers, four of his cousins and bums like that. And Max is awful tough to beat when he thinks he can belt you. I'll never forget his Schmeling fight. Schmeling hit him enough to murder him, but Baer had decided he was going to win, so he did.

DUMB DAN MORGAN—This is the best-looking Irish fighter since Jim Coffey, and I hope nothing happens to him like happened to Coffey. He had lived on stew and beer all his life, so after he got a little dough he went out and bought a bottle of champagne and drunk it all.

Well, the stomach just couldn't take the shock. It affected him all over, particularly his chin. Must've affected his brain, too, for when he fought Frank Moran he kept trying to hit Moran on the chin . . . never realizing the guy had strengthened his jaws and made his neck four sizes bigger by eating chuck steak every meal.

LEW (HONEST BRAKEMAN) DIAMOND—I'm brunging in all of my hexers to put the whammy on Baer. I got Evil Eye Finkle; Myer the Eyer from Chier, the Finger and the Weazil all set. They gonna set on opposite sides of the ring and give Baer the eye and the finger. The Weazil's a new one. All he does is set and point his thumb at the bum he wants to see lose. The Finger, you know, uses the index finger. Myer the Eyer from Chier has stole a lot of Evil Eye Finkle's stuff, like the flutter-lid whammy and the eye-roll curse. I ain't paid any of them off for so long that I'm gonna let them put the eye and finger on Ancil Hoffman's money belt after they make Baer faint.

JACK KEARNS—This is hard to believe but if Comiskey belts out Baer I'm going to let him go his way. I mean I haven't got him tied up to fight for me exclusively. I've been squawking about the way Jacobs does that kind of thing for a long time. So why should I do it myself. I'd like to see the kid be an independent . . . Fight for the promoter who can get him the most dough, whether it's Mike or me or Joe Doakes. That's the only way you'll get the $1,000,000 gate back. I think the Baer-Comiskey fight will do more than $100,000, especially with Dempsey in there refereeing.

Curious Coin, Paying $6.70, Wins Havre de Grace Feature

Pete, Jr., Second, 3 Lengths Behind; Ed Johnson Saddles Winner of First

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 20.—The Brandon Stable's Curious Coin, capably handled by Jockey Mannie Berg, a graduate of the half-mile circuits, won the Woodholme Purse, the feature of a cheap, but interesting program. Eight fair 2-year-olds marched postward for the test of 6 furlongs and the finish line found Curious Coin winging three lengths in front of Pete Jr., owned by Mrs. M. R. Waugh, and a neck farther away from R. F. Tartiere's Light of Morn.

Curious Coin had many backers among the crowd of 8,000 and supplied a $6.70 pay-off while stepping the three-quarters in 1:12 2-5 over a fast track. As usual, the weather was perfect for the sport of kings.

Light of Morn jumped to the front when Starter Jim Milton opened the the starting gates, but Curious Coin soon flashed ahead and from that point to the wire it was a case of trying to catch the sprightly son of Brandon Mint and Curiosity Box. Light of Morn did some good chasing but weakened as the result and Pete Jr. came from behind to take second money.

Edwin Johnson, son of Walter Johnson, former Washington mound star and now a candidate for Congress, saw his colors triumph in the first race. His friend and trainer, Elmer Haubeck, jr., saddled Good Reception and the filly came off the pace to win going away at a $16.20 pay-off. Busy Fingers closed ground to be second ahead of Challante.

Jouett Shouse's Joanny led virtually all the way in the second race to pay $6.10 and put the finishing touches on a $49.80 mutuel in the daily double. Dulie, of half-mile fame, was second, with Talent, one which broke poorly in third position.

Zacatine Wins Second Straight

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 20 (AP).—F. J. Buchanan's Zacatine gained his second consecutive victory on the Narragansett oval today when he scored by three lengths over Metcalf and Carr's Frontier Jane in the 6 furlongs Albany purse for 2-year-olds. Conn Smythe's Royal Marlboro, the favorite, was nosed out for place.

Zacatine and Frontier Jane fought for the lead from the gate until the Buchanan youngster pulled away going around the far turn. Royal Marlboro closed with a rush but the faltering Frontier Jane managed to hang on until she crossed under the wire.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

After a week of slumming, race fans in this section will see a bang-up racing card at the Graw today. The program is topped by the $10,000 added Potomac Handicap and there should be action aplenty before one of the eight horses visits the winner's circle. C. S. Howard's Mioland, despite an assignment of 124 pounds, is the probable favorite but the West Coast star will have to have on his running shoes if he expects to take down the main money. A lot of opposition is expected to come from Gen's Manager, winner of the Sarmaticus Purse in New York last out. He downed Dusky Fox, Pilot Biscuit and a group of speed horses. The Son of Morvich gets in with 116 pounds. Many customers in Washington and the vicinity will be pulling for Yancey Christmas to take it all with Rough Pass. The Brandon Stable's Pass Out is conspicuous by his absence. He pulled up a bit sore in his last start and it was decided to give him a let-up. Jockey Ruperto Donoso, who has been riding sensationally since he came to this country, plans to vacation at his home in Chile. Before leaving for New York to ride in an Aqueduct stake he said that he will leave at the conclusion of this meeting and will not return to the States until Hialeah opens. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt has purchased the mare, Rust, for breeding purposes. Hats off to Trainer Guy Bedwell. He was plenty mad when he heard that Apprentice Jackie Boyle struck Miss Ponne over the head after the mare ran a bad race Thursday. Bedwell refused to allow Boyle to ride yesterday, putting Peters on Tanganyika instead of the apprentice. Marshall A. Smith who has been walking around as a living example of "I'll Never Smile Again" for the past month, yesterday was a perfect reflection of "Happy Days Are Here Again." There's reason. The Smiths own Wahcoo, Thursday's $92 winner. It only takes one of those to make a man well. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Pimlico Lady was an easy winner in New York at the expense of $2,000 platers. She should have little trouble scoring over this cheaper grade field. Nijinsky showed good effort last start in New York and will be the one to beat. Little Kiss has won five out of seven starts in the West.

Second race—Miss Brideaux was only four lengths back of Cis Marion and Sun Triad on Monday in good time. Today's competition is decidedly cheaper which gives her the edge on figures. Bright Camp drops down and might be dangerous. High Name is a money possibility.

Third race—Clyde Tolson was runner-up to Jay Jay in his first start since May in creditable time. With that conditioner under his belt he should be ready for best effort. Ariel Toy couldn't threaten in New England, but recent works indicate a return to top form. Robespierre appears best of the others.

Fourth race—Son Altesse was not driven out all the way to score over most of the contenders in this race on Monday. In under the same conditions he figures to repeat. Tony Steel, second to the top horse last out, will be the one to beat. Milk Punch was closing fast behind Jay Jay recently and merits serious consideration.

Fifth race—Mioland, winner of the American Derby at Washington Park last month, is rated one of the top 3-year-olds of the season, with the exception of Roman Flag his opposition in the Potomac appears made to order. The latter is not overmatched and could threaten on best effort. General Manager to beat the others.

Sixth race—Dnieper finished in third place only three lengths behind Oversight after winning earlier in the meeting. He appears well placed in this field. Phone Dijon was fourth in $2,000 company in New York and figures to offer most of the contention. Darby Du was second to Dnieper opening day.

Seventh race—Betrothed needed her race Thursday, racing with Room Service. Stable connections report that the filly is ready to put it over today. Tramp Ship ran several good races in New York with fair company but best races are on off tracks. Navarin appears capable of taking care of the others.

Best bet—Mioland.

Capital Transit Net Decreases 3.2% in Month

Increased Provision For Taxes Offsets Revenues' Gain

Despite an 8 per cent increase in operating revenues, net income of the Capital Transit Co. dropped 3.2 per cent in August as compared with the same month last year. Net income was $26,601, as compared with $27,487 in August, 1939.

The report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission showed August operating revenues of $1,043,165, as compared with $965,813 last year. Operating expenses were $760,290, as compared with $706,658. Provision for depreciation was $112,957, as against $110,829 last year, the increase being attributed to the new street cars and buses put in service. Interest charges were $60,860, against $61,130 in August, 1939.

Taxes were $104,014, as compared with $79,902 a year ago. In a letter accompanying its report, the company stated that $16,700 of this increase represents a provision for additional taxes which will result from the tax bill now before Congress.

The provision for injuries and damages in August of 1940 was $11,780 less than in the same month a year ago.

For the eight months ended August 31, 1940, Capital Transit reported net income of $468,701, against $361,133 in the like 1939 period, an increase of 29.8 per cent.

Sharp Increase Noted In Cotton Spinning

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the cotton spinning industry operated during August at 90.4 per cent of capacity, on a two-shift, 8-hour week basis, compared with 86.5 per cent during July this year, and 85.1 per cent during August last year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—September wheat, purchased by consuming interests attracted by its relative cheapness and by dealers not wishing to make delivery on "short" sales, rose a cent a bushel today to the highest level in more than two months.

This buoyed the entire grain market. Trading in all September grain deliveries will cease after tomorrow and any contracts not settled will then have to be satisfied by delivery of actual grain before the end of the month.

Wheat closed ⅛@1 cent higher than yesterday, September, 77⅞@77¾; December, 77⅞@77¾, and May, 78⅛@78; corn was ⅛ off to ⅜ up, September, 61½; December, 56@56⅛; oats unchanged to ¼ higher; soybeans, ¾@1¼ higher; rye unchanged to ¼ up and lard, 5@15 higher.

Traders continued to liquidate September corn despite the fact that No. 2 yellow was quoted more than a cent higher. However, new crop contracts firmed with wheat, reflecting diminished bookings to arrive and receipts. Brokers said recent reduction in spot prices had curtailed country offerings. Some selling of September was attributed to an elevator interest.

I.T.&T. Reports $126,977 Loss In Six Months

Deficit Laid to Drop In Dollar Value of Foreign Currencies

By the Associated Press

International Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported yesterday net loss for the six months ended June 30 of $126,977. In the same period last year net profit was $1,345,474. Both figures are exclusive of the results of European and Mexican subsidiaries and of cable and radio-telegraph subsidiaries. Net income last year, inclusive of subsidiaries which were excluded this year, was $3,235,527.

In a letter to stockholders, Sosthenes Behn, president, said:

"The decrease of approximately $900,000 in telephone and radio-telephone operating revenues, as compared with the similar period of 1939, was caused by the decrease in the United States dollar value of the foreign currencies realized from such operations. Actually the revenues in local foreign currencies for the period in question were in every case in excess of those for the similar period of 1939."

Because of the war, Behn said, the company had included in its report the results only of those subsidiaries "which engaged primarily in the operation of telephone properties in the West Indies, South America and the Far East, and the corporation's domestic subsidiaries, except International Standard Electric Corporation."

W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co.

W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co., Fort Madison, Iowa, reported net income for the six months period ended August 31, after provision for depreciation and estimated taxes on income at rates now in effect, of $248,339, or $1.55 plus per share of common stock. This compared with net income of $243,298, or $1.52 plus per common share for the same 1939 period.

Pere Marquette Railway

Pere Marquette Railway reported August net income, after all charges, of $149,852, compared with a deficit of $107,893 in August, 1939. For the eight months of 1930 net income was $345,639 compared with a deficit of $1,000,676 in corresponding period of 1939.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 78,820

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports in its weekly survey of motorcar production, estimated today that output for the current week would be 78,820 cars and trucks. Last week assemblies numbered 63,240 and a year ago this week 55,350.

The survey said that operations would continue higher and might advance to 100,000 units next week.

Scrap Copper Price Continues Advance

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Scrap copper was lifted ⅛ cent a pound to the equivalent of about 11½ cents for refined metal today after a similar rise yesterday. Refined copper is quoted at 11½ cents by all important sellers.

The advance accompanied reports from fabricators of substantial increases in orders. The new business, it was believed, indicated practical capacity for many plants in the next several months.

Upward Trend In Meat Prices Seen Next Year

Increased Demand, Smaller Supplies Of Livestock Seen

By the Associated Press

American consumers may have to pay higher prices next year for their bacon, ham and beefsteak.

The Agriculture Department said yesterday that slaughter supplies of livestock will be smaller in 1941 than in 1940 because unfavorable producer prices last spring discouraged breeding operations. Demand, on the other hand, is expected to be larger.

The rise in consumer prices, the department said, will be more pronounced for pork products than for other meats.

Farm Income to Rise

The Agriculture Department also predicted that livestock farmers would receive a larger cash income from meat animals in 1941 than in 1940 despite prospects that they will have fewer to sell.

Livestock numbers on next January 1, the department said, will be between 3 and 4 per cent less than a year earlier, on an animal unit basis. A decrease in hogs, it added, will more than offset an increase in cattle.

As a consequence, slaughter supplies will be smaller. With consumer demand expected to be greater than this year due to spending effects of the national defense program, prices can be expected, the department said, to average higher. The expected price increase, it added, would more than offset the reduction in supplies in determining income from livestock.

Pig Crop Is 8 % Less

The department based predictions of smaller supplies and higher prices on the face that this year's spring pig crop was 8 per cent smaller than a year earlier. Farmers curtailed breeding operations because of unfavorable hog prices at that time. This fall's pig crop has been forecast at about 27,800,000 head compared with 32,000,000 last fall.

The department said it expected no marked change in lamb supplies next year.

Looking farther into the future, the department said cattle numbers probably will increase in the next few years, while hog numbers may fluctuate around the level of the past two years.

The department said that the usual seasonal increase in hog marketings is now getting under way. With prospects for an unfavorable hog-corn price ratio, many farmers were said to be marketing spring pigs early, and that as a consequence a larger than usual proportion of the spring crop may be marketed before January 1.

Election Betting Banned on Floor, Exchange Warns

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange has quietly reminded its members there are rules forbidding betting on the trading floor and the announcing of bets placed for customers on the Presidential election.

Word has quietly passed among the membership that a look at Exchange regulations would reveal betting restrictions.

Says Rule 127: "No member shall offer publicly on the floor to bet up the course of the market."

Says Rule 607: "No member or member firm shall make public announcement regarding moneys held for the purpose of betting on elections or any other matter."

There has been much publicity recently regarding election odds quoted on Wall Street. The Exchange said it was "customary in the general course of things to remind members of betting restrictions just before Presidential elections."

Just Share of Taxes Asked for Industry

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Raoul E. Desvernine, president of the Crucible Steel Company of America, told the National Industrial Advertisers Association here today that "industry is prepared to bear its just share of the tax burden to meet the tremendous cost of adequate national defense."

He added, however, that "any form of tax or forced loan that would act to retard or disorganize production would not be merely undesirable but disastrous."

By the Associated Press

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported yesterday that it had loaned $102,377,760 up to September 18 to farmers on 1940-grown wheat under the Government's price stabilization program. The number of loans made totaled 222,415.

Stocks Show Surprising Firmness in Face Of 5-Day Rise; U. S. Steel Active, Higher

New York, Sept. 20.—All that can be said for the stock market performance today is that the price level was maintained. The list was a little topheavy in spots, and a decline would have surprised no one after five days of advance, which in turn followed a week of pessimistic action. But the composite action of the Herald Tribune actually showed a minor advance today, making it six days in a row.

The gain was unimpressive, since it amounted only to 0.02 point, which is not far from zero. The fact that a plus eventuated meant something, however, especially in the face of the week-end liquidation usually present in these uncertain times of European warfare. Everyone feels dubious these days about European week-ends, and a tendency to lighten commitments is understandable.

Some disappointment also was occasioned in the market by rumors that the unofficial polls are showing a trend toward the Democratic Party among the electorate. Wall Street is so accustomed to having elections and everything else run counter to its hopes that this factor probably played only a minor part in the activities of the day.

The statistical record of business is taking a most favorable course, and it is somewhat disappointing to find the stock market apathetic in the face of record steel production, carloadings and other performances of a like nature. The new tax bill probably explains that attitude, since it promises to remove all incentive of the profit variety for expanded and accelerated production. If the armaments program continues on the basis foreshadowed by appropriations, activity soon may rival that of the wicked days of Calvin Coolidge, when the country enjoyed remarkable and continued prosperity.

Metal issues were higher, as they were aided by increased requirements for copper, for domestic delivery. Aviation and steel stocks held their recent gains, while oils, utilities, motors and equipments eased slightly.

United States Steel was the most active issue of the day, but advanced only a small fraction. Commodity markets were improved modestly, with changes no more significant than those of equities. Foreign exchange dealings remained in the rut of officially controlled rates.

Listed bonds were irregular in a quiet session, which was marked by modest week-end liquidation. The tendency of a few dealers and speculators to take the cautious side was evident in foreign dollar issues and some recent favorites among the domestic rails. United States Treasury obligations were firm, and fair investment demand persisted among the best rate corporates, some of which now are crowding 1940 highs. Turnover was $5,640,000.

Argentines were quite weak in the foreign divisions, owing to the fresh obstacles placed in the way of trade with the United States by quota action. Other Latin-American bonds also were dull. Australian and Canadian bonds drifted slightly lower, and German and Italian issues were irregular. Bonds of the German-occupied countries were mostly soft.

The speculative rail group continued to attract most attention, with advances quite numerous, although some favorites declined. The cheaper reorganization carrier bonds did better than higher priced interest-payers. Some of the holding company issues remained in favor, but convertibles were ignored. International Telephone bonds suffered a sinking spell, owing to the Rome talks.

Washington Area Store Sales Gain 5 Per Cent in Week

Boston, 11; New York, 8; Philadelphia, 7; Atlanta, 20; Chicago, 21; St. Louis, 2; Minneapolis, 12; Kansas City, 22; Dallas, 12, and San Francisco 12 per cent.

The Cleveland district reported a 2 per cent decline.

U. S. to Offer 25 Laid-up Merchant Vessels for Sale

By the Associated Press

The Maritime Commission shortly will offer for sale without restrictions as to purchaser or use 25 cargo vessels from its laid-up merchant fleet.

By imposing no restrictions it would be possible for the British government to submit bids.

The vessels have deadweight tonnage of approximately 8,500 to 9,000. Some are laid up in the James River in Virginia and some at New Orleans.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Export grain circles heard today Great Britain was inquiring for large Canadian wheat tonnages to be transported overseas in the 25 United States Government-owned merchant vessels which the British are dickering to buy.

The plan, export circles said, was to utilize the American owned vessels, if the British finally bought them, to transport the wheat as well as other foodstuffs in the voyage to their new home.

Stores Enlisted In Fight on Higher Prices

National Retail Group Urges Protection For Consumers

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—A plan to enlist merchant cooperation for protection of consumers against higher prices during the Nation's multi-billion dollar defense spending has been announced by the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

The association said it had appealed to its 5,700 member stores to obtain pledges from their merchandise buyers to resist "unreasonable and unjustified increases in prices in the months ahead."

The program for working with federal authorities in stabilizing business conditions was indorsed in a meeting of the directors of the association's merchandising division, the announcement explained.

Included in the pledge sought from store buyers are:

"I will vigorously resist any price advances in the wholesale market which seem to me to be without justification.

"I will report efforts by manufacturers and their salesmen to stampede me into buying unusual quantities by talk of shortage.

"I will not speculate in merchandise.

"I will instruct my salespeople not to talk to their customers about threatened shortages and forbid them to urge consumers to 'buy now before prices go up.'"

Santa's Toy Pack, Despite War, Seen Heavier This Year

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Toy manufacturers assured the Nation today Santa Claus' Christmas pack would be heavier and more varied than ever despite the European trade blockade.

"Not a single juvenile play favorite will be missing due to war conditions," said H. E. Luhrs, president of the Toy Manufacturers of the U. S. A. "For over a generation American toy makers have introduced all of the important new developments in playthings and have been virtually independent of foreign sources of supply."

He estimated the 1940 toy pack would amount to about $230,000,000 —5 per cent heavier than in 1939— and would emphasize American subjects, including defense.

Major Staples Rise Briskly; Copper Leads

Cotton and Wheat Share in General Upward Swing

By the Associated Press

Major commodities skipped up the price scale in sprightly fashion in future markets.

Copper at New York rose an outside of around ¼ cent a pound as dealers in spot metal reported heavy demand at strengthening prices. The British and United States governments placed orders this week which will assure capacity operations for many fabricators for the next sevral months.

Wool tops jumped around 2 cents a pound, rubber as much as one-tenth cent and Santos coffee about one-tenth. Other staples marked up included silk, sugar, cottonseed oil.

Cotton rose 15 to 35 cents a bale at New York, largely on buying by trade interests.

Wheat at Chicago gained ⅛ to 1 cent a bushel. Demand centered on the September delivery, which reflected a tight supply situation because of the amount of wheat going into the Government loan. Corn ended ¼ lower to ½ higher.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 72.60 from 72.45 Thursday.

Home Loans Rise Sharply During Month

D. C. Total Keeps Pace As National Figure Sets 11-Year High

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Keeping pace with a national advance, member associations of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League loaned $1,155,000 for construction of 198 new homes in July. Loans made by savings, building and loan associations throughout the Nation in July reached an 11-year high and surpassed by $10,000,000 or more those of any month last year.

The United States Savings and Loan League reports that the $39,-907,000 advanced nationally was the largest proportion of any month's loans by these institutions to go into construction financing since before the depression. This was 34.9 per lending activity which the National league shows at $114,301,000, or within a few hundred thousand dollars of the record month, May, 1940.

Analysis of July estimated loans made by all associations in the United States, and purpose shows: Construction, $39,907,000, or 34.9 per cent; repair and modernization, $6,115,000, 5.4 per cent; home purchase, $40,658,000, 35.5 per cent; refinancing, $17,649,000, 15 per cent; other purposes, $9,972,000, 8.6 per cent; total, $114,301,000.

Listen! with Glynn

As nice lot of newsworthy events will be heard over WJSV today as you'll hear in many a Saturday.

Another one of those half-hour programs from bomb-scarred London is scheduled at 5:30 p. m. for a comprehensive report of how Londoners are carrying on. Ed Murrow, chief of CBS's European staff, has arranged for descriptions for six diverse points in the beleaguered city. In addition to those done by Ed himself, and by CBS's Larry LeSeur and Eric Sevareid, three British Broadcasting men, Gerry Wilmott, Michael Standing and Vaughan Thomas, will take part. Microphones will be at Trafalgar Square, the fashionable Mayfair Hotel, a bomb shelter from which, of all things, you'll hear the strains of music played by Ambrose's Orchestra; a railway terminus and in a couple of well known streets.

At 11 a. m. WJSV listeners will have their first chance to hear on the radio Claude Wickard, the new Secretary of Agriculture, as he speaks on Columbia's "Country Journal." A lot of people may take a personal interest, sad to say, in the talk given at 7:45 p. m. by another member of the Department of Agriculture on the "Your Government This Week" program. Dr. Henry Stevens talks then on hayfever pollen.

Maury Maverick, the former Congressional firebrand, now Mayor of San Antonio, Texas, tells why he has abandoned his stand for isolationism in a talk scheduled for 9:35 p.m.

The Post Radio Time Table

9:30 A. M., WMAL—Sir William J. Coxen, Lord Mayor of London, addresses the United States Conference of Mayors convening at New York's Waldorf.

11, WJSV—Secretary of Agriculture Claude E. Wickard makes one of his first addresses since assuming office when he greets America's farmers on Columbia's Country Journal.

2:30 p. m., WJSV—Republican Vice Presidential candidate Senator Charles L. McNary starts his campaign.

3:30, WMAL—Running of the Beldame Handicap for fillies and mares at Long Island's Aqueduct.

3, WRC—The Budapest String Quartet plays three quartets at the Library of Congress: Haydn in G major, Op. 76, No. 1; Mendelssohn in E flat, Op. 12; Beethoven in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2.

5:30, WJSV—"London Carries On!" Columbia's staff in the British capital explores the streets, the air-raid shelters and the crypt of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields in a special half-hour similar to a thrilling one of three weeks ago.

5:30, WMAL—Here's one of the annoyingly stupid things about radio. NBC plans a program exactly like the one heard over CBS. So far as this investigator can discover, they are two different programs of the same thing at the same hour. There are some of us who might like to hear both, NBC, and CBS was there first!

6, WJSV—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Legion in Boston answer the question: "Is Our Defense Lagging?" on the People's Platform.

7, WRC—Knickerbocker Playhouse: a new series. The first in this Saturday parade will be a newspaper yarn. Casts will be drawn from names well-known in radio.

8:30, WOL—David Stanley Smith's "Rhapsody of St. Bernard" receives its first radio performance on Alfred Wallenstein's American Choral Festival. The celebrated cantata, nearly an hour in length, was composed in 1915.

9:15, WMAL AND WOL—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the Presidency, asks "War or Democracy?"

9:35, WJSV—Maury Maverick reveals "An Isolationist's Change of Heart."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Oh Say Can You C. I. O. — BY MILTON CANIFF

MASTER—DID YOU HEAR THE COMMANDER SAY THERE IS AN OFFICER COMING TO JUDGE US! WE SHOULD HAVE TAKEN THE KEY FROM THOSE MEN AND ESCAPED!
BUT THINK OF THIS, FAITHFUL HU SHEE! WE ARE ON AN ISLAND ...THESE FISHERMEN ARE REPAIRING OUR DAMAGED MOTOR BOAT ... UNTIL WE CAN RECAPTURE OUR CRAFT, WE MUST WAIT!
BUT COULDN'T WE HAVE TAKEN A FISHING JUNK? WE MISSED A GOLDEN CHANCE!
WE WOULD MAKE A PITIFUL SHOW AGAINST THESE EXPERT SAILORS —IT IS ONLY SAFE TO GAMBLE WHEN THE CARDS ARE MARKED IN OUR FAVOR... PATIENCE!
MEANWHILE...
GOOD NIGHT'S WORK! NOW, ALL WE NEED IS A STACK OF DYNAMITE!
NO TROUBLE AT ALL... JUST CALL ROOM SERVICE!
WE LIE LOW ALL DAY SO WE'RE NOT SEEN...THEN THAT BILLIARD BALL DOME OF YOURS GETS A WORKOUT, DUDE!
I GET IT...YOU WANT ME TO PLAY NATIVE 'CAUSE MY HEAD'S SHAVED! -BUT I WON'T DO IT... I DON'T BELONG TO ACTORS EQUITY!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

GOODBYE, AUNT MARY! I HOPE SOMETIME I CAN REPAY YOU FOR WHAT YOU'VE MEANT TO LEONA AND ME!
JUST BE A GOOD GOVERNOR, JOHN! I KNOW YOU WILL!
WHEN WE MOVE INTO THE EXECUTIVE MANSION YOUR OWN ROOM WILL ALWAYS BE READY FOR YOU!
THANKS, CHILD! BUT I COULDN'T ASK FOR A MORE PERFECT HOME THAN THIS!
GRANDMA--THERE'S A TRAMP AT THE BACK DOOR, AN' HE'S BOUND HE'S GONNA TALK TO YOU!
HMM! NICE! VERY NICE! I DIDN'T EXPECT ANYTHING QUITE SO RITZY!

DONALD DUCK — It Pays to Advertise — BY WALT DISNEY

MICKEY FINN — Over-Matched! — BY LANK LEONARD

THIS GUY, FINN, WAS WISHED ON ME BY THE COMMISSIONER, BIFF—SO CONVINCE HIM THAT HE'S NOT TOUGH ENOUGH FOR MY SQUAD—AND FAST!!
IT'LL BE FAST, INSPECTOR!
I'M READY!

DIXIE DUGAN — Glamor Girls — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

THE GIRLS ARE "PRISONER GUESTS" IN A HIDDEN VALLEY. THEY GET UNUSUAL HOSPITALITY
OVER HERE, GIRLS
NEXT!
THIS WAY
-NEW CLOTHES FOR YOU, GIRLS
HERE THEY ARE, MASTER!
NY, MY, YOU BOTH LOOK FRESH AS DAISIES!
YOU LOOK PRETTY "FRESH" YOURSELF
HMPH!
WHY ARE ALL THE PEOPLE IN THIS HIDDEN VALLEY OLD ? AND WHAT DOES THEIR YOUNG MASTER PLAN TO DO WITH DIXIE AND MICKEY?

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Bon Voyage — BY FRANK MARTINEK

HURRY WITH THAT BARREL, COMRADES—THE MASTER IS READY AND WAITING
HERE IT GOES RIGHT THROUGH THE TRAP DOOR INTO THE SPEEDBOAT

NETAH! YOU CLUMSY FOOL! GET UP AND DANCE! YOU ARE KEEPING WAHOO, OUR GUEST, WAITING!
I CANNOT, PREMIER TORRO! IN FALLING I TWISTED MY ANKLE!
INDEED! MISERABLE HALF-CASTE! THEN I SHALL TWIST YOUR WRETCHED NECK!
HEY! KEEPUM HANDS OFF OF HURT SQUAW!
SOCK!
LET ME AT HIM! I'LL CARVE HIM LIKE A FOWL ON A PLATTER!
GENTLY, TORRO! WE NEED THE LITTLE FELLOW WHO SO STRANGELY RESEMBLES ME! YOUR VENGEANCE CAN WAIT!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

LOOK, KING! ALONGSIDE THAT ORE TRAIN!
THE ENGINEER IS SHOOTING AT AN INDIAN!
A MOUNTIE NEVER TAKES ME!
DROP THAT RIFLE!
NOT WHILE I CAN PULL THIS TRIGGER!
